DAD AIDS GIRL WHO POISONED MAN FOR LOVE

Two in Fatal Triangle—Death ended the hopeless love of Mrs. Ruth Steadman, 26, and Robert G. The woman, now in City Hospital, married and the mother of a small girl, must face murder charges . . . as (right) Kenneth A. # ANZAC TROOPS DOOM TOBRUK

By W. P. SAPHIRE
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CAIRO, Jan. 22 (INS)—Dust-grimed, sand-bitten and unshaven, yelling and singing British and Australian troops plunged through the defenses of Tobruk today and fanned out in a sweeping operation promising complete occupation of the port momentarily.

Charging through both lines of the Tobruk defenses, the British cut off thousands of Italian defenders inside carefully constructed defense posts around the perimeter.

Information received at general headquarters in Cario said the Italians were "dazzled and nonplussed" by the rapidity and ingenuity of the attack.

Australian authorities in Sydney early today announced Tobruk had fallen but a later announcement said that reports of the capture were erroneous.

In London today Prime Minister Churchill told Commons that "it may well be that while I am speaking Tobruk and its garrison are in our hands."—Editor's note.

The British main force battered its way along the main road from Bardia, penetrating the defenses at a crossroads within the perimeter, but just outside the actual town. The British then took another crossroad and an anti-aircraft post just outside the defense area.

ITALIANS SURRENDER

Once the main force was well inside, the infantry wheeled around and attacked occupants of the outer defenses from the rear. Many Italians surrendered when confronted at bayonet-point.

The break-through of the powerful outer defenses of Tobruk was accomplished after a single day's assault, although this had been preceded by many days of siege and investment and heavy artillery and aerial bombardment.

Many prisoners were taken, including one general.

The Italian cruiser San Giorgio in Tobruk harbor was in flames, as were ammunition dumps and stores of other military supplies.

(In London a Reuters News Agency report said there were indications that German troops soon may be fighting beside the Italians in Africa as a result of the recent meeting between Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini—Editors note.)

SURPRISE ATTACK

The sudden assault was launched against Tobruk after attention had been diverted from the Libyan battle zone by the British advances in Eritrea against fleeing Italian forces following capture of the border stronghold of Kassala.

But late military advices explained that the brief lull in the fighting around Tobruk was caused by the severest sandstorm in living memory. When this abated early Tuesday morning 'before

Churchill Reveals Plan to Invade Nazi-Held Lands

By CHARLES A. SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Jan. 22—Great Britain's determination to carry the war to Germany on continental Europe with a formidable, "amphibious" army was disclosed to the House of Commons by Prime Minister Winston Churchill today.

After virtually confirming the capture of Tobruk, vital Libyan port, by British troops in North Africa, Churchill told of Britain's 4,000,000 "armed and uniformed" men who had been trained, nto only to defend these islands, but to cross the waters and challenge Adolf Hitler on his own grounds.

All sorts of factories have been established, he said, to equip and supply this expeditionary force when the time comes for Britain to take the offensive in Nazi-occupied Europe.

"It may well be that while I am speaking," the prime minister said, "Tobruk and its garrison are in our hands."

Churchill for the first time gave some detail of the new expeditionary force that Britain is establishing against the time when this country may take the initiative on continental Europe against Germany.

FOUR MILLION UNDER ARMS

"Counting the home guard," he said, "we have 4,000,000 armed and uniformed men who will play a part in the defense of our hearths and homes.

"But an army capable of being transported overseas in the form of military units will be measured by different standards.

"All sorts of factories have been established, sufficient to provide this army with all it will require in continuous action in Europe against the Germans.

"The bulk of these new plants is only just beginning to come into production. Many of them are still structurally incomplete.

SEN. M'NARY, G.O.P. LEADER, JOINS LEASE-LEND BILL FOES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (INS)—Charles L. McNary of Oregon, Senate Republican leader and 1940 G. O. P. vice-presidential nominee, today announced his opposition to the lease-lend bill "in its present form," as Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, warned Congress that the bill is tantamout to authorization of an "undeclared war."

McNary's statement was the first formal pronouncement by the Republican leadership in Congress on the stand the minority will take on the legislation.

McNary made his announcement in a press conference as he returned to Washington from California where he has been recuperating from an illness.

Thomas, perennial Socialist presidential candidate, appeared before the House Foreign Affairs Committee which is holding hearings on the legislation.

McNary said:

NOT DEMOCRATIC WAY

"I am opposed to the lend lease bill in its present form because it grants extraordinary and total power to one person. This is not the democratic way of life, and I earnestly hope that the bill may be modified by appropriate committees, or after debate in the Congress.

"During the fall months the President was advocating aid to Great Britain short of war. That policy became a national anthem. There was unity of thought.

"I favored that plan and shall support earnestly an all-out policy of aid to the democracies by every method short of war. My great concern is to keep our country out of the conflicts of mass murder in Europe, Asia and Africa."

In explanation, McNary said he hoped for modification of the bill, and that he had in mind amendments that would limit the time of operation of the bill, limit the amount of money to be spent under it and limit the powers of the President in the possible use of American war vessels for convoy of ships to England.

He said, however, he was not in a position yet to say what exact amendments he would insist on, nor the exact limit of time and money he would favor.

BILL FOR "UNDECLARED WAR"

The Socialist Thomas branded the measure "a bill to authorize undeclared war in the name of peace, and dictatorship in the name of defending democracy."

Thomas declared that the mess-

Willkie Hops for London Carrying Trench Helmet

NEW YORK, Jan. 22 (INS)—Carrying a borrowed trench helmet and a letter from President Roosevelt to Prime Minister Churchill, Wendell L. Willkie departed for bomb-swept England today aboard the Yankee Clipper at 8:30 a. m.

Mrs. Willkie hugged the big, shaggy-haired Republican presidential nominee of 1940 and kissed him on the right cheek just before he ducked inside the plane at LaGuardia Field and waved to him as the great ship soared aloft and was lost in the clouds over the Atlantic.

Someone recalled to her that he had some newspapers and a book he had wanted to read and she cried in dismay:

"Oh, he forgot the book."

Willkie, who endorsed the lend-lease bill for aid to Britain, was forthright in his statement directly before departure. Before about 300 persons who crowded the balcony at LaGuardia Field, he said:

"I am going to England for a few weeks because I believe so strongly that the survival of Eng-

Dad Aids Girl In Triangle Love Killing

Her heartbroken father retained counsel today to defend Mrs. Ruth Steadman as the blonde, 26-year-old Harvard secretary came slowly out of the valley of the death she sought after allegedly slaying her sweetheart. Police said that the young mother, now in a private room at City Hospital, is still suffering from the effects of the overdose of sleeping tablets she took.

Apparently she does not realize that her "Bob"—Robert G. Emery of Natick—is dead.

"How is Bob?" they quote her as having asked many times during the day. "How is he and where is he? Won't anyone tell me? Can't I see a newspaper?"

BODY IN MORGUE

Bob's body lay on a slab in the southern mortuary waiting to be claimed by the young wife he deserted or by members of his family.

Dr. Cornelius O'Leary has performed an autopsy but will withhold formal announcement of the cause of death until the organs have been chemically analyzed by Police Chemist Frank Stratton.

The application for a warrant charging Mrs. Steadman with homicide is waiting the medical examiner's report, police said.

Emery's body, a rope twisted around his neck, was found on the floor of Mrs. Steadman's apartment in Brighton st., West End, yesterday afternoon.

She lay unconscious on a bed in another room, unclad, but covered with a blanket, when police entered the suite.

Police said that when the girl recovered consciousness at City Hospital after strong restoratives were used she moaned:

"I was in love with him. I wouldn't do without him. I killed him and I want to kill myself."

According to the official version of the statement she gave, the girl said she had ground up 15 sleeping tablets and mixed them with a glass of milk she gave the man. Then she twisted the rope around his neck as he lay unconscious.

Authorities said that Emery had taken enough tablets to have killed him, although strangling may have played a part in his death.

CALLS LAWYER

Mrs. Steadman, a graduate of Needham High School in the class of 1931, is the daughter of Francis J. Stanwood, Boston public utilities accountant and soldier's relief agent for Needham.

After having his daughter moved from a ward to a private room today, Stanwood called to his home Atty. Edward Flynn of Tremont st., to discuss what steps he would take in defense of the daughter.

The girl's husband, Kenneth Austin Steadman of Crafton, Pa., a suburb of Pittsburgh, was so completely stunned by the tragedy that

Food Poisons 83 at Rutland, One Vet Dies

RUTLAND, Jan. 22—Death of one patient and illness of 82 others from food poisoning following the Sunday night supper at the U. S. Veterans Hospital was revealed today by Dr. Harrison M. Stewart, manager of the hospital.

The victim is John Joseph O'Donnell, 45, World War veteran, of Woburn.

Four of the hospital personnel have practically recovered, but 78 patients are still under treatment, Dr. Stewart said.

O'Donnell's death on Monday was officially attributed to accidental food poisoning by Dr. H. I. Zaritt of Gilbertville, district medical examiner, who performed the post-mortem examination.

Laboratory examination is now being rushed on remains of meat loaf served at supper. Dr. Steward said this was regarded as probable cause of the wholesale poisoning and that in his opinion all the other patients and hospital personnel were saved by prompt measures taken by the staff.

The patients are now reported recovering "satisfactorily."

'I'M GOING TO LOSE 20 POUNDS'

By MARY X. SULLIVAN

Off to my gym this morning, feeling remarkably fit, and not loathing the idea of my physical torture session as much as usual.

MARY X. SULLIVAN CHECKS HER WEIGHT
Down to a Mere 124 Pounds

It must have been a premonition, because I weighed a mere 124 pounds after my shower. That's a pound and a half off, and while that may not seem like anything much, let me tell you that I felt like stopping total strangers on the street to tell them about it.

Not that I need to, with this goldfish-bowl existence I'm leading! And while I'm sick of looking at my puss in the paper, I really am getting a missionary spirit about this. If I can stick to it, and persuade other overweights to join me, I think I'll have earned my merit badge.

NOT EVEN ONE LITTLE CHEAT!

I honestly haven't cheated the least little bit on eating heartily. I wouldn't dare diet rigidly with this grippe flying about. Perhaps you all don't need as much protein as I do, but I have been eating at least one egg every day, besides my full portion of meat at dinner time. Also I have increased my fruit-juice drinking.

Nor am I eating tea-room portions. I find that I am really hungry at 6 o'clock, and I eat broiled or roast meat or fish, skipping potatoes and gravy and dessert, at places like Warmuth's, Durgin Park's or Dinty Moore's.

Grudgingly, I must admit that I think the exercise is doing me good. I certainly have more energy than I used to have, and am walking resolutely past taxi stands, and I seem to get more work done with less effort.

And I know the massage is wonderful, because I haven't lost the weight in my face and shoulders, but in places where it most needed to come off. My clothes are feeling loose around the middle for the first time in years. Perhaps I shall dare to buy something other than black soon.

One of these nights I'm going to have the courage to try on a dinner dress which I wore last at the premiere of the Knute Rockne picture in South Bend, Indiana.

HERE'S WHAT ONE DRESS DID

The night of the big banquet at Notre Dame, I found to my horror that it just wouldn't zip up the sides. There was too much of me. There I was, all glamored up with Schiaparelli perfume, and I just couldn't make both ends of the dress meet.

It took three dramatic critics (female) to hook me up, and I sat through three hours of feasting and speeches holding my breath, not daring to eat a morsel, in the most acute fear of bursting a seam.

That's the sort of thing that drives us to reducing. And, honest, it's not so bad after you hurdle the first week.

You're getting more optimistic, Mary. Let's see how you feel tomorrow!

Five Down, Fifteen to Go

At this rate, Mary X. is one-fourth of the way toward her goal—20 pounds off. There are only 15 pounds more to go. A cinch, Mary! And we're proud to see you're not cheating—even a little bit.

Crash Kills Professor Graustein

Prof. William C. Graustein of Harvard University was killed today when his car crashed into an eight-foot stone pillar at the entrance of Belmont Cemetery Grove st. and Huron ave., Belmont.

Passing motorists extricated Prof. Graustein from his wrecked car and took him to the Cambridge Hospital where he was pronounced dead.

His wife, Mrs. Mary Curtis Graustein made the identification after police checked registration in the car.

The Grausteins lived in Shepard st., Cambridge, and have no children.

The son of Adolph and Julia Graustein, the professor was born in Cambridge and graduated from Harvard with an A.B. degree in 1910. He was 52 years old.

He was a mathemetician of renown and during the World War was attached to the U. S. proving grounds at Aberdeen, Md. He was made a full professor in 1933 after serving successfully as instructor and assistant professor in mathematics from 1919.

Prof. Graustein also was the author of several standard works on analytic and solid geometry.

'RAIDER' REACHES BOSTON AIRPORT

Uncle Sam's Air Defense Command swarmed to the air today when more than 30 important New England industrial plants, hospitals and schools underwent spasmodic "air raid" alarms in the simulated "air invasion" of this sector by "enemy" aircraft.

"Poor visibility," military score-keepers said, aided the invaders to slip through the ground cordon of volunteer observers. It accounted for one enemy bomber theoretically reaching East Boston Airport, according to Capt. Frederic H. Smith, controller of air raid defense activities in Boston, who reported four interceptions on six raids.

These alarms, part of the second day's aircraft warning maneuvers, were sounded in Auburn, Webster, Framingham, Worcester, Salem and Brockton.

Military judges ruled there was some damage at Worcester, where a spectacular dog-fight developed as interceptor planes mixed with bombers. According to the judges some bombs could have been unloaded before the enemy planes were driven off.

Two blind volunteer observers, Eino Friberg and John Cooney Manning, from a station on Green Hill, outside Worcester, amazed their associates by picking up the sound of approaching planes long before they could be heard by the others.

While this was going on, Chelsea armory reported two "enemy" flights intercepted, one from the sea on Cape Cod and one just north of Boston.

The armory, key station for incoming calls from 437 volunteer observation posts, reported the safe arrival, with escort, of two generals from Mitchel Field, L. I.

GENERALS ARRIVE

Their progress was reported continuously along the route, press relations officers said, and now the officers are inspecting the complex telephone set-up for air-raid warnings.

The generals are Maj.-Gen. James E. Chaney, commanding general of the Air Defense Command, which is co-operating with 10,000 N. E. Legionnaires and the State Public Safety Committee, in the make-believe "invasion," and Lieut.-Gen. Delos C. Emmons, commanding general of general headquarters air force at Washington.

Both generals pronounced the first day's "warfare" "highly satisfactory" and added praise for the work of women volunteers.

They said women "undoubtedly" would be used in air raid defense in the event of a national emergency where trained personnel would be required to handle and evaluate messages from civilian "spotters" in the field.

While they were at the armory, West Roxbury obstrvation post, "78 Edward 60," Joseph F. Nolan, chief observer, ran up a score of 15 planes observed between 9:59 and 10:13 a. m.

These "enemy planes" came in threes, the first four at close intervals.

Assisting Nolan were J. Frank Burke, past commander of Irving Adams post, A. L.; John J. F. Fahey, William E. Dacey, Archie Cameron, James Chellis and Mrs. Bernard Conrad and Mrs. Joseph Downing. A 55-man crew reported "no activity" between 6:30 and 11 at the post last night.

Military Mass For YD Men In Charlestown

A military mass for the officers and men of the 182nd Infantry, 26th Division, was held in St. Francis de Sales Church in Bunker Hill st., Charlestown, today.

After the mass, the regiment and regimental colors were blessed by the Rev. Laurence M. Brock, S. J., regimental chaplain, who also celebrated the mass.

The church was filled with rows of soldiers in uniform and two soldiers were acolytes on the altar: Pvts. William H. Hunt and Ronald A. Hogan.

Assisting Fr. Brock were the Rev. Maurice Whelton, S. J.; the Rev. Thomas Brennan, S. J.; the Rev. George W. McHugh, the Rev. Mark C. Driscoll, D. D., pastor of the church; the Rev. Joseph A. Robinson and the Rev. James L. Conlon.

At the conclusion of the mass Staff Sergts. John P. Wright, Jr., bearing the national colors, and James F. Gallagher, bearing the regimental colors, marched up the aisles to have the flags blessed.

Both the organ and the regimental band played. In command of the regiment, that leaves in a few days for Camp Edwards, were Col. Howard E. Fuller and Lieut.-Col. James Kennedy.

"Let us pray to God that the clouds of war hovering over Europe and Asia now never come to darken our shores," said Fr. Brock during his sermon. "Let uh pray that you men soon going to camp will be sent back to your homes without ever having to fight."

The petition of six voters of Massachusetts to have Thomas J. Buckley ousted as state auditor because of alleged corrupt practices was opened before three justices of the superior court today.

DOCTOR WOULD FORM SUPER ARMY BY DIET

FORT LEWIS, Wash., Jan. 22 (AP)—An army doctor declared today that he could hand-pick raw army recruits and create a force of "super men" by scientific dietetic supervision in the mess hall.

Should they lose their weapons and the shirts off their backs, the "tiger" in them would still make the men dangerous as a battering, bare-fisted brigade.

Col. Albert P. Clark, head of the Fort Lewis Base Hospital and nutrition authority, paraphrased in an interview the Napoleonic precept to the interpretation:

"An army fights on its stomach."

"If I had the opportunity to select personally 5000 men from the 48,000 we expect to have in this area by spring, and feed them a specially prepared diet which included increased mineral and vitamin content, I would have a small army of unbeatable men within six months," asserted the colonel, who is the surgeon in charge of the entire 3rd and 41st divisions at Fort Lewis and Camp Murray.

"They would be super-men—men who would fight with rocks and their bare fists if they lost their weapons. They would be a superior type of shock troops, which seem to be so successful in modern winning armies."

Justice McReynolds To Quit High Court

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP)—Justice James Clark McReynolds, outspoken opponent of much New Deal legislation, notified President Roosevelt today that he would retire from the Supreme Court Feb. 1, after 26 years of service.

The veteran jurist, who will be 79 years old Feb. 3, was the only member of the tribunal described by administration officials as "conservative."

His retirement opens the way for Mr. Roosevelt to make his sixth appointment to the nine-man court. There have been reports that Chief Justice Hughes, 78, might retire soon, but they have been unconfirmed. Friends expressed the belief that Hughes would remain on the court as long as his health permitted him to do the work.

Atty.-Gen. Robert H. Jackson has been mentioned frequently as a possible appointee to the first vacancy on the court. James M. Landis, dean of Harvard Law School and former chairman of the securities commission, has been mentioned for the post.

TWO-SENTENCE LETTER

McReynolds' notification to the President was a formal, two-sentence letter. It stated his intention of withdrawing from the court under the law permitting the retirement at full pay annually of justices over 70 who have served 10 consecutive years on the supreme bench.

"I have the honor to advise you," McReynolds wrote, "that on the first day of February next I will avail myself of the rights, privileges and obligations declared in the act of Congress entitled an act to provide for retirement of justices of the Supreme Court, approved March 1, 1937, ... and retire from regular active service on the bench as an associate justice of the Supreme Court.

"Continuously since 1914, I have held a commission as such justice and am now more than 70 years old."

FOUGHT NEW DEAL

McReynolds, the senior member of the court, disclosed to friends that nine years ago, upon reaching 70, he had first contemplated resigning, and has at times yielded rather reluctantly to the urging of friends that he continue to serve.

Some associates said that he had remained on the court in order to cast his vote against New Deal legislation that he considered unconstitutional and in the hope that another President than Mr. Roosevelt would appoint his successor.

Butler Attack Trial Jury Finally Chosen

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., Jan. 22—Additional talesmen reported to Superior Court here today and two remaining jurors were chosen for the trial of Joseph Spell, 31-year-old Negro butler, accused of attacking Mrs. Eleanor Strubing, Greenwich society matron.

After lengthy queries, the jurors were chosen after the original panel of 24 talesmen was exhausted. Six are men and six are women.

Spell, arrested Dec. 11 after Greenwich police reported that Mrs. Strubing had accused her butler of thrice attacking her and then hurling her into a lonely Westchester County, N. Y., reservoir, sat impassively as the talesmen were questioned in a courtroom from which a dozen deputy sheriffs barred the public.

A short, broad-shouldered Negro with high cheekbones, Spell was arraigned yesterday, pleaded innocent and elected trial by jury.

Mrs. E. Strubing

The nature of the defense's strategy was indicated in questions shot at prospective jurors by Atty. Samuel E. Friedman of Bridgeport, retained for Spell by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Friedman demanded from almost every one whether they would rather take the word of a white woman of "high social standing" than that of a Negro servant, and whether they would hesitate to free the defendant, if convinced of his innocence, because of the "shame and disgrace" to the woman resulting from an acquittal.

In his questions, State's Atty. Lorin W. Willis stressed the state's contention that spell "with force and violence" overpowered Mrs. Strubing while her husband, John K. Strubing, Jr., New York advertising executive and one-time Princeton quarterback, was absent from their home in the upper-crust Round Hill section of Greenwich.

Strubing was in the courtroom for the start of the trial, but his 32-year-old wife, the former Eleanor Paul of Philadelphia, remained in seclusion awaiting the state's call for her to appear as the accusing witness.

KNUDSEN IN PLEA FOR SPEED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP)—William S. Knudsen, director of defense production, told the nation's governors today that if America had faith and was willing to "have a little sweat for a year or so, then we might save a little blood later on."

Presenting to the Governors' conference a plan to survey all idle machine tool facilities that might be used to speed up armament production, the head of the new office of production management said earnestly:

"I ask you, I request you and I beg you to fall in with this idea of keeping our resources lined up, and keeping all of our people enthusiastic, hopeful and confident we can come through this show."

The necessity for keeping up public confidence was due, Knudsen said, to the use of the psychology of fear in the European war.

He related that an engineer friend brought back to him from London recently the opinion that bombing would never subdue the British because "the more you bomb them the madder they get."

"You might get scared of some one when you can't see him," the former General Motors president said, "but after you see him that is pretty much the end of the psychology of fear."

Envoy Donovan Loses Passport

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Jan. 22 (AP)—The palace of King Boris was searched in vain today for the diplomatic passport of Col. William J. Donovan, United States observer who has been touring Europe and Northern Africa on a secret mission.

Donovan discovered his loss as he was about to leave for Belgrade, Yugoslavia. He searched his pockets, his luggage, his hotel room and finally appealed to the staff of the palace, where he had spent an hour and 20 minutes talking to the King.

The Orient express was held up 20 minutes. Finally Donovan boarded it after the American legation had made arrangements for him to cross the border without his passport.

GOVERNOR'S BUDGET NEARLY $200,000,000

Impelled by State co-operation in national defense, a record-breaking State budget, approaching $200,000,000 for 1941 and 1942, was prepared today by Governor Saltonstall for presentation to the Legislature tomorrow.

The problem of keeping the state tax within or close to the $16,000,000 figure of 1940, aside from highway fund reimbursements to cities and towns, has been one of the major concerns during weeks of preparation of the budget.

The governor must keep within that figure to avoid necessity of new or increased taxes, which he frowned upon in his inaugural message.

Participation with the federal government in a huge road-building program and other defense measures, including proposed extension of East Boston airport, purchase of another airport site in Bedford and another secondary airport near Springfield were expected to add large sums to the budget.

In addition, there was anticipated increase in highway work, of about $2,000,000 each year, another million increase in capital expenditures, and another $750,000 a year additional welfare reimbursements to cities and towns.

The road-building program alone, if the state takes advantage of all federal funds now available, would add approximately $4,250,000 to the 1941 budget as the state's share in the project.

Two years ago, Gov. Saltonstall submitted original budget recommendations totalling nearly $151,000,000 for the two years of 1939 and 1940. The figures were later revised, and as finally approved after ways and means committee revisions totalled $153,343,017 for $77,113,408 for 1939 and $76,229,609 for 1940.

Tending to offset rise in the state tax were increased state revenues from corporation, inheritance and estate, departmental revenue, cigarette and liquor taxes and surtaxes on income taxes. These items last year returned to the state $3,707,000 in excess of the estimates and are likely to continue or increase still further during 1941 and 1942. Added to that was an increase of $1,100,000 in the yield of gasoline taxes over estimates.

Why the Cod is CODDLED

Why do 40-Fathom fishermen bed the just-cleaned Cod below decks in smooth layers of pulverized ice?

Because ordinary chopped ice would bruise the tender flesh. This special ice, soft as snow, costs a little more, but it carefully protects the quality of the Cod, Haddock, Perch and other fish destined to become 40-Fathom Fillets.

Painstaking care at every step from trawler to table has made 40-Fathom a "best-seller" coast to coast. And helped to make Boston better known than ever before as the source of the nation's finest seafoods.

WEDDING FREES DON HUMBERT

Part of the troubles of Humbert Canzano — Don Humbert, night club band leader—ended today in Roxbury court when Judge Samuel Eisenstadt dismissed a morals charge against Don and Celia Isabelle Spiegel, 21, blonde Back Bay ribbon salesgirl.

The dismissal came when the couple displayed a marriage certificate showing that they had been wed on Monday.

"Now behave yourself," advised the judge to the musician in filing the charge.

"Be sensible and stop playing around with young girls."

But there is still a little matter of assault and battery to be faced as a charge on Friday by the romantic Don, who had his face roundly slapped in the courthouse corridor last Thursday by Dorothy Arnold, 19, of Townsend st., Roxbury.

This was after Canzano had pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault and battery against the fiery Dorothy's 24-year-old sister, Sonya, of the same address.

Dorothy had been ejected from the courtroom on order of Judge Timothy Ahern after she jumped up in court, ran to the bench and cried that she had also been whacked by the musician.

She ambushed Canzano outside in the corridor, and in the brief flurry, with Don filling the role of "he who gets slapped," she cried:

"You made me commit perjury. You'll marry me before you marry that other girl."

But Don has married the other girl, and when the assault and battery hearing comes up Friday—will the fiery Dorothy be present again?

Coast Air Plant Strike Averted

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Jan. 22 (AP)—Federal Conciliator Harry C. Malcom announced today that a threatened strike at the Ryan Aeronautical Co. plant had been averted. No terms were immediately announced.

The settlement preceded by three hours and a half a scheduled walkout at 7 a. m.

The conciliator said details of a contract were being worked out and a wage scale—major obstacle of the conferences that started 1ast Dec. 11—would be announced later by Ryan and Frankensteen.

Approximately 1000 workers would have gone out on strike, which would have halted production on $11,400,000 in orders for military training planes.

The union's original demand was for a minimum hourly wage of 75 cents. Frankensteen said the U. A. W. would not agree to a contract containing a wage scale under that signed at the Vultee Aircraft Co. in Downey, Cal., after a strike several months ago.

The scale won by the Vultee union local ranged from a minimum of 55 cents an hour for beginners to a top minimum of 62½ cents for experienced workers. The last offer of Ryan which was made public contained a 50-53-cent wage scale.

22 Preachers Want All Clergy Included In Call to Arms

BURGETTSTOWN, Pa., Jan. 22 (AP)—Saying they wished to assume "all the responsibilities of citizenship," 28 United Presbyterian clergymen of Washington County adopted a resolution asking that they not be exempted from military service.

The resolution further suggested yesterday that Congress "remove from the recent conscription bill those clauses that exempt ministers from military service."

"Defend your Community"
1629–1941

FROM its earliest days, Boston has recognized the necessity for community action in caring for all in need. Indeed, in 1629, before leaving England, the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Company voted " . . . that a common stock should be raised . . . to be employed only in the defrayment of public charges . . . transportation of poor families, building of . . . fortifications, and all other public and necessary occasions of the plantation. . . "

This week, Greater Boston's 46 cities and towns unite in a great cause of similar purpose. In the never-ceasing war against disease, dependency, delinquency, defeatism, despair, crime and poverty, they set out to raise at least $4,883,000 through the Greater Boston Community Fund Campaign of 1941. This is the minimum necessary to meet the budgets of more than 200 hospitals, health and social agencies which give direct help each year to over 400,000 men, women and children—to one out of every five people in Greater Boston.

In this critical year, it is more evident than ever before that we must build a stronger, healthier, sounder community because national defense starts with community defense. The 1941 Community Fund deserves your support. Give generously.

NEEDHAM FATHER STANDS BY WOMAN IN TRIANGLE SLAYING

he was unable to say what he would do.

Over the long-distance telephone from Pittsburg, Steadman, who is 28 and an insurance executive, told the Boston Evening American:

"I don't know what to say. I don't know what to think. I'm leaving it all with her family. If they want me to come to Boston, it is up to them."

DESERTED HUSBAND

Mrs. Steadman deserted her husband and their 10-month-old daughter, Judy, last October, to carry on the illicit romance with Emery, himself the father of two children.

"I knew the man, all right," Steadman said today. "I met him last summer."

Asked if he knew Emery and his wife were having an affair, Steadman replied:

"I don't know. I don't know."

"But weren't you aware of it when your wife left you?" he was asked.

HAZY ON PLANS

"She didn't say anything," was his answer. "I knew she was going, but we didn't talk about it."

"Had you heard from her since?"

"Yes. We had normal correspondence, but she didn't say anything about that. I didn't ask her. We didn't write about it."

When he was asked again if he had made any plans to come to the side of the young woman, Steadman only replied:

"I don't know."

When the news of the tragedy was broken to him, however, the young husband said to Pittsburgh reporters:

"Emery is the name of the man who is dead? That's who I thought it was. He has a wife and two children. Women are funny."

Emery's wife, Ruth, 26, who lives in Front st., South Natick, with her children, one 4 years old, and one 4 months old, was prostrated by the horror of it all and denied herself to all visitors.

Mrs. Steadman, according to police, had "definite suicidal intent" when she was taken to City Hospital and her wrists were pinioned to her cot.

Today, when she was moved to a private room, her wrists were released by a private nurse who was retained to watch her every minute. A police guard is also being maintained on a 24-hour-a-day basis.

Police said this afternoon that the girl would probably be moved to the psychopathic hospital for examination.

When Mrs. Emery was called from her home last night to identify her husband's body, she stood for a moment, stunned. Then she sobbed softly.

"Yes, that's Bob," she said. "Poor Bob. I knew he probably had gone to her when he left home a week ago. I didn't hunt for him or notify anyone. I knew he would have to work this out himself."

SCHOOLMATES

Steadman and his wife attended school together at Needham High school and were married in that town's Christ Church in 1937.

This is what her high school year book then said of Mrs. Steadman:

"Ruthie is noted for her vivacity and blondeness and athletic ability. She has been an important member of our hockey team for four years, and is one of our social lights."

"Ruthie" herself listed her greatest failing as "the boys," and her ambition, to become "a society woman."

If workmen had not arrived at Mrs. Steadman's West End apartment to do some repairs she would have died, police reported.

They found Emery dead and were certain that she too was no longer alive when they called in police.

By her side were the two notes on which police base their case against her. One was addressed to her father and another to a man friend of Emery.

In one note held by authorities, she wrote:

"I can't stand Robbie paring up and down the floor. We're so much in love and it's so hopeless.

"I gave him 15 tablets in some milk. Before he slept he knew something was wrong, but it was the only way. We could never have been happy as we were. Please forgive me."

When a Boston Evening American reporter was permitted to talk to her, Mrs. Steadman said:

"I tried to kill Robbie and myself. I'm afraid I didn't do a good job of it."

Asked why she did it she replied:

"Robbie is married and so am I. We were so much in love. We couldn't have each other because she wouldn't give him up."

Lapsing momentarily under the influence of the powerful drug she had used, Mrs. Steadman cried out:

"Please let me talk to Robbie." But then she called for a comb and brush and, half conscious, announced she must look her prettiest for Robbie before seeing him.

"I couldn't have done it. I couldn't have," she cried a moment later as she revived and remembered the last hours with the man she said she loved.

EXPLAINS TO FATHER

To her father, Francis J. Stanwood, assistant auditor of the New England Power Association, soldiers' relief agent in Needham and former president of the Needham Golf Club, Mrs. Steadman left a letter in which she wrote:

"Last night I couldn't make you believe that I loved Bobby. Now maybe you will believe me. But you were right. There wasn't any hope. This seems to be the easiest way out for us.

"We couldn't be happy. There were too many people between us. We had hurt them and we couldn't forget that. It wouldn't have worked. I know that now.

"Please go to see if Ruthie is being taken care of."

Stanwood said the interview with his daughter had taken place last Saturday at Cleveland Circle, Brighton. Emery was present.

"The interview was unsatisfactory, because both my daughter and Emery declared they would never give one another up," he said.

"I said to my daughter: 'Snap out of it. This isn't as serious as you seem to think. You both have children. I believe you can take up your lives where you abandoned them and go on as before!'"

Stanwood said Emery told him:

"I guess you don't think much of me but I can't help it. I love your daughter. Nothing else matters. We need some advice and some help to straighten ourselves out."

Mrs. Steadman was interviewed at the hospital by Capt. John F. McCarthy of the homicide squad.

TELLS OF ROMANCE

"Mrs. Steadman told me," Capt. McCarthy stated, "that Emery was unable to obtain a separation from his wife. She knew their love affair would have to terminate so, she said, she thought it best that they both should die.

"She said she gave him heavy doses of sleeping powder in liquor they were drinking and in milk, and took some herself.

"When he became groggy, she fastened a rope around his neck. She said she intended to draw it tight and kill him but found she loved him too much to take his life. Then she lapsed into unconsciousness, she told me."

Capt. McCarthy said his investigation had disclosed the fact that she had left her apartment during the day to purchase the sleeping tablets and the brand new piece of rope with which she intended to strangle Emery.

Mrs. Emery was called at her Natick home by Captain McCarthy. She rushed in to Joy st. station and, after a talk with police, went to the morgue where she identified the body of her husband.

She knew of the affair between her husband and Mrs. Steadman, Mrs. Emery told police.

FRIENDS FOR YEARS

She said she and Mrs. Steadman had been friends for five years, and that it was through her that her husband and the other woman met.

"I haven't seen Mrs. Steadman, however, since last July," Mrs. Emery said. "I suspected that there may have been something between my husband and her, but did not know of it until a few days ago when he himself told me.

"He told me they were infatuated with each other, but I believed the infatuation was all on her side."

Mrs. Emery told police that her husband had been having financial difficulties. He disappeared from their Natick home Jan. 13, Mrs. Emery stated, but she hoped, she said, that he was seeking a job.

She added that she did not report him missing because she had some fear that he might have gone to visit Mrs. Steadman.

Mrs. Emery has been married six years. Her home was in Danvers before her wedding.

In the last six months Emery's business slumped badly. Two bank accounts were closed out and when he left home he had but $1.

Mrs. Steadman took the apartment on Brighton st. after leaving her husband and their 10 months old daughter, in Crafton, a suburb of Pittsburgh. She obtained a job as a $100-a-month secretary in the Harvard School of Business Administration.

Steadman graduated from Needham High School in the same class as his wife, 1931. She attended the Bouve School of Physical Education and graduated in 1934. He graduated from Massachusetts State College in 1935 and later attended Babson Institue.

In Pittsburgh he has been employed as supervisor of an insurance company.

Not only did she appeal to her father in a letter to look after "Ruthie," who is Emery's wife, but she also wrote to John L. "Scottie" Benvie, operator of a Medfield filling station:

"Maybe you will think it devilish to put this on you now, but you are the only friend of Bobby I can tell. I placed sleeping powders in a glass of milk that he drank.

"I think at the last he suspected something, even though I did grind them all up. I couldn't stand the way he paced up and down, up and down, trying to figure a way to happiness for us. It was hopeless.

"There would always be someone between us and this seemed to be only way out. Will you please help Ruthie?"

Benvie said he was puzzled to know why she should have written to him, as he had met Mrs. Steadman only a few times. He admitted, however, he was a close friend of Emery's.

Steadman was in the downtown Pittsburg office of his insurance company when a reporter from the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph told him what had happened.

He caught his breath and couldn't speak for a minute or two. Then he asked:

"Is there a description of the man? I believe I know who he is. Haven't you a description."

At the time there was no complete description available and Steadman remarked:

"This may involve more than one family."

LEARNS DETAILS

The reporter suggested that Steadman might learn more if he went with him to the newspaper office. Without another word the young husband smudged a drop of moisture from one eye, then donned his overcoat.

At the Sun-Telegraph office the details were coming in over the teletype. Steadman read the copy, his shoulders were lumped. His lips were pressed together—in pain.

"That's it," he said. "That's it. Last July my wife and I went back home to Boston on vacation. I was to meet her there.

"My vacation was postponed unavoidably, and I didn't get to Boston until September.

"Afterwards she came home with me, but in October she went back to Boston. There wasn't any quarrel or any argument. She just left."

Steadman said that his young wife had first met Emery in July as far as he knew.

It was said that Mrs. Steadman had left her husband twice before and had been reconciled with him, but he declined to discuss that.

"She went to see her folks at times," he remarked. "There isn't anything strange in that."

3 Birthdays May Have Been Factor In Love Killing

Brooding over three birthdays —her sweetheart's, her boys' and her own—may have played a part in motivating Mrs. Ruth Steadman to kill Robert G. Emery and then try death herself, police said today.

Emery was 25 years old last Sunday. Mrs. Steadman will be 27 years old Friday.

Suing Wife's Woes Many, Court Told

A man of many idiosyncrasies was Samuel Drukman, his wife testified in Suffolk Probate Court today, not the least of which were tearing up parking tags, throwing eggs, and arguing.

Mrs. Sally Drukman of Brookview st., Dorchester, is suing Drukman for divorce on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment. The suit is contested.

To Judge Robert Gardiner Wilson, Jr., Mrs. Drukman testified:

"We were married Dec. 21, 1927, and went to live with my mother at her home in Brookview st.

"The trouble with my husband all started over money matters. He used to be an insurance broker, though he's been on the WPA for some time, but he'd never pay much money into the house. My mother had to help support us."

"He had an auto registered in my name. He used to tear up the parking tags and I'd get summonses six at a time. I had to go to court at least 30 times. It made a nervous wreck of me. I had nervous indigestion for weeks."

"How did your husband manage to stay on the WPA so long?" Judge Wilson interrupted. "Who did he know?"

"He knew someone," said Mrs. Drukman.

Judge Frank D. Crowley, counsel for Mrs. Drukman, lifted a sly eye at Judge Wilson, who used to be a Boston City Councilor.

"Perhaps Drukman knew a city councilor," he suggested blandly.

"He'd have to know better than that," said Judge Wilson.

"Among Mr. Drukman's idiosyncrasies were that—if he didn't like his eggs, he'd throw them at his wife," she said.

Action on Wood Again Delayed

Because of the continued illness of Executive Councilor Frank A. Brooks of Concord, appointment of former State Auditor Russell A. Wood as chairman of the Fall River Board of Finance, was held in committee by the Governor's Council at today's meeting.

At his press conference today Governor Saltonstall said:

"I believe in the qualifications of Mr. Wood for the job, and expect the council, as sensible men, will confirm the nomination."

The council unanimously confirmed the nomination of Arty. Herbert A. Baker of Hingham as special justice of Dedham district court to take the place made vacant by the death of James A. Halloran.

It also unanimously confirmed the nomination of James Dolan of Lincoln as state director of live stock control. The lease of Shawme state forest to a special federal military commission which will draw up a lease for its use in extension of Camp Edwards, Sandwich, was confirmed by the council.

By a vote of 5 to 2 the nomination of Norman M. French of Worcester as master in chancery, was rejected by the council.

'Calls Beano Man 'Charity Cheat'

William J. Cabral, city of Fall River, Sewer Department, and Watertown beano operator, was called a "charity cheat who conned innocent American Legionnaires" as the government closed its case against him in Middlesex Superior Criminal Court today.

The charge was made by Asst. Dist. Atty. Epstein Martin summing up the prosecution's side of the allegations that Cabral set up and promoted a lottery in the huge Watertown beano games.

"Cabral had the Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars as a blanket," Martin said. "The veterans were innocent, unaware of his scheming. The $50 a week he paid them was only a cloak. I say he cheated them!"

After a charge by Judge Harold L. Williams, the jury retired

IT'S WINNING THE WOMEN'S VOTE FOR ROOMINESS AND EASY RIDE!

WE did two new things in this year's Ford that women tell us make all the difference in the world to them.

First, we made the car much bigger. Front seating width was increased as much as seven inches. Wheelbase was lengthened. Bodies were both lengthened and widened. The Ford car now exceeds everything in its price field in total inside length . . . in total seating width . . . and in windshield and window area. You ride in lots of room . . . and you take in all the view!

And you ride in really restful comfort, too. For our other big improvement this year was an entirely new Ford ride. A soft and quiet ride, on city street or country road, that many people tell us is something new in cars at any price!

So for room and ride and style . . . as for handling ease and thrift . . . there's a car at your Ford Dealer's that's worth taking the whole family to see before you decide on any car this year!

FORD FEATURES THAT STAND OUT AT THE PRICE:

EIGHT-CYLINDER PERFORMANCE. With proof in many tests that Ford owners enjoy extra cylinders without extra cost for gas or oil.

ROOMY BODIES. Roomiest in the field in total inside length, total seating width, total passenger room.

BIG HYDRAULIC BRAKES. Biggest of any car near the price. For greater safety and longer brake-lining service.

THE NEW FORD RIDE. A soft, quiet ride, wholly new this year, based on new springs and ride stabilizer, new frame and improved shock absorbers.

BIG WINDOWS. Biggest windshield, biggest rear window, and greatest total window area in this price field.

NEW STYLE. Not just a new front, but entirely redesigned this year in hood, fenders, bodies and interiors.

McNary Joins Foes Of Lease-Lend Bill

ure is so broad that if it were passed, President Roosevelt could deliver the American fleet to England, ignore the Johnson act and neutrality law and scrap all labor laws.

Thomas, tall, gray haired and emphatic, declared that the "all out" British aid measure gives Mr. Roosevelt more power than President Wilson had during the World War.

Asserting that the bill is not essential to "reasonable aid" to England he asked why Mr. Roosevelt wants it enacted and then answered:

"For one of two reasons: either he wants to make a breath-taking gamble on the lives and destinies of 131,000,000 American men, women and children on the chance that limited war, which this bill means, will not become total war, under his control; or else he wants to put us in war gradually, knowing that we would refuse to go into it all at once.

VAST POWER FOR F. D. R.

"Either reason is wholly inconsistent with democratic control by the people over their own destiny. It is wholly inconsistent with proper interpretation of representative government."

Thomas, who has supported many New Deal measures, spared no words in his denunciation of the measure authorizing aid for Britain.

"That such a bill should be introduced at all at the request of the popular leader, President Roosevelt, on the eve of his inauguration, after an election campaign in which he gave not the slightest hint of asking such powers, is a technique completely at variance with proper democratic procedure," he said.

He said the bill gives the President "power to commit any and every conceivable act of war except the despatch abroad of large armies."

"If words have their ordinary meaning he could even use our sailors and airmen to deliver so much of our fleet to England or any other country, as he might desire," said Thomas.

"Admittedly he could completely ignore the Johnson Act and the neutrality law. I think under the breadth of powers given in Section 9 he could ignore all labor laws insofar as they apply to the production of 'defense articles' which in turn have been so broadly defined that they might include almost every conceivable thing."

COULDN'T RESIST POWER

Thomas conceded that Administration spokesmen have laughed at the idea that Mr. Roosevelt would attempt to exercise such powers.

"But," said Thomas, "it is highly significant that from the Administration's side has come no proposal for limitation on the law or clarification of its extent."

He said he did not attack "the excellence of the President's moral intention" and pointed out that he had in the past praised President Roosevelt.

"In no sense, then, do I make a personal or partisan attack on Mr. Roosevelt when I say that no man, even an angel from heaven, who asks such breath-taking powers of war or peace with such vague limitations, should be trusted with them.

"If democracy in this crisis gives sole control of peace or war to one man, it has already surrendered the front line trenches to the principle of totalitarian dictatorship."

Thomas asserted that Cabinet officers who testified on the lease-lend bill had little to say about the bill itself.

"Their arguments might have been considered a taste—a very weak one—for an honest and straightforward declaration of war by Congress," he said.

CHURCHILL REVEALS NAZI INVASION PLAN

But a large number are three-quarters or four-fifths finished."

Churchill took occasion to remind Britain of its comparatively small losses in men since the war began.

"After 16 months of war between the greatest states armed with the deadliest weapons," he said, "not more than 60,000 British folk—nearly half of whom were civilians—have lost their lives by enemy action."

100,000 EMPLOYED

With regard to aircraft production, Churchill said:

"In the 16th month of this war, we have surpassed by 100,000 the number of workers employed in munitions and aircraft production in the 48th month of the last war. Now is the time when the full British war effort will come to be realized.

"This great nation is getting into its war stride. But the future contains no evidence justifying lassitude, any more than it does despondency or despair."

The Prime Minister intervened in a debate over man-power and production, energetically answering criticisms of departmental and cabinet routine. He defended his recent creation of cabinet executive committees and resisted appeals for formation of a five-man war cabinet on the ground it would not give the best results.

The government, he said, fully appreciates the necessity of preserving good-will of the working classes as "the sole foundation upon which we can escape from our present predicament."

PRODUCTION NEEDED

Answering assertions that the British army is being built up to unwieldy size at the cost of factory production, Churchill said:

"The size of the army was settled within a few weeks of the war. It has not been altered except to the extent of providing equipment for ten more divisions.

"I am not going to say how many divisions it totals, but it is a large and formidable force, both as regard to amphibious power and for defense of this island.

"The shipping tonnage available at the time will govern the size of the army to be taken overseas. But it is munitions factories and agriculture which in the next six months will make the chief demand upon the man-power of this country."

Churchill promised Commons a chance to vote later on the labor conscription plan announced by Labor Minister Ernest Bevin.

Knox Says Britain Using 49 Swap Ships

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP)—Secretary Knox said today that with one possible exception all of the 50 destroyers traded to Great Britain for Atlantic naval bases were already "on the other side."

The possible exception, he told a press conference, was a warship which was damaged in a collision after it had been turned over to the British, and even this one "may be over there now."

To Mrs. S. Shumrak, 47 Shepard st., Lynn.
From her sister Sarah, Mrs. Sarah Stern,
50 Belgrade Rd, London, N. 16.
27th Oct. 1940.

My dear, dear girl:

You really must pull yourself together and be a true British-American. I know it is certainly hard to live in constant suspense, wondering all the time what is happening.

It is most agonizing, I have had plenty of it, so I know. But, my darling, do please try to do justice to your little family. Don't make them miserable. It just isn't fair.

Also I can't understand why you have not heard from me for five weeks. I write every week. The only time I missed was the week we were in trouble with your poor mummie. But that was not during the five weeks that you mention. Who knows how many of our letters get lost on the way? But we did get your air mail letter two days ago. Thank you very, very much.

SIREN STILL ON

You can say you don't know how we exist. I can hardly answer that question for we don't know ourselves. We went to the shelters at 6:30 last night and the all clear was not sounded till 7 o'clock this morning. Less than an hour later there was another warning.

That was half an hour ago and it is still on. It is quiet, so I suppose they are fighting on the outskirts. We are certainly getting it day and night and it is no holiday, I can tell you.

Our sides are sore and bruised from trying to snatch a sleep on the hard forms in the shelter. We have been promised bunks but our turn has not come yet. I don't think they will be long now, as the shelter further up the road has them already.

With all that we are going through the enemy is not getting all his way, either. Our boys are giving as good as we get. A fortnight ago a bomb fell on a house two doors away from our house. It demolished two houses and damaged ours.

We were in the shelter and I did not know anything about it until afterwards. We shall not be able to live in our house for perhaps a few months, until the council will repair it.

WITH FRIENDS

It is unsafe to live in, so we are staying with some friends in the same road. Alf, of course, offered us his home immediately but his address would not be convenient for us and Daddy has got used to our shelter and does not like to change.

Also, we do not want to lose our places in the shelter. The friends we are with are old friends of mine and we are made as comfortable as it is possible. They are an extremely nice couple. You see, we take our blankets and pillows to the shlter in the afternoon and reserve our seats. Then we go there at dusk and take sandwiches and milk. Sometimes we can get tea there, too.

During the day we carry on as best we can. Bessie is away with the boys at Peterboro. She went there about six weeks ago and intended to stay a few days.

While she was there her house got a direct hit and it was completely demolished. Thank God a thousand times there was not a soul in the house. We have got so used to these things that material damage does not have so much effect on us after the first stunning blow.

We fix our minds only on human lives. If everybody is safe, that is all that seems to matter and we are duly thankful. But it is heartbreaking enough just the same

IN SAME BILLET

Bessie took it very rough when she heard of it, but she is all right. The boys are lovely and are still in the same billet.

Lily will not hear of going away again, unless I go with her. As I can't do that, she is staying here with us. She has hardly had any schooling lately, but we can't help that, so I am not allowing myself to worry about that.

With God's help, if we get through the present struggle, she will catch up by studying a year or so longer.

Well, I think I have written you a full chronicle of the news this time, so will close, hoping you are all keeping well. Remember, take care of yourself and don't waste your energy. If you could help by wearing yourself out, it would be different, so try to keep your chin up.

Lots of love to Sammie, Herby, Rena and Rhoda and to your dear self from all of us here.

Your loving sister,

Sarah.

Britain Set for Invasion

By ROBERT G. NIXON
International News Service Correspondent, Who Has Just Returned from London.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22 (INS)—Britain, with lightning rapidity, has mobilized, trained and re-equipped a new army to defend the English islands against Hitler's coming invasion.

Starting from absolute scratch, Britain has thrown up a cordon of powerful, mobile defenses that will make Germany's attempt costly in the extreme if not an abject failure.

In the six months since Dunkirk and the French collapse the work that has been accomplished is little short of a miracle.

England lost an army's equipment in the Flanders debacle, but it saved an army. The equipment doesn't matter. The men do.

If the Germans had launched a full-scale attack immediately after the French collapse Britain would have been virtually defenseless. The loss of the British expeditionary force's equipment at that time might have proved a disastrous factor. Today that equipment has been replaced.

ALREADY PROVEN

How valuable the saving of 330,000 of its 365,000 men will prove in history already has been shown in the smashing victory of the British forces over the Italians in Africa. At the core of the British army in the western desert are the veterans of Dunkirk.

The narrow strip of water that separates the cliffs of Dover from German-occupied France is a formidable barrier that, with proper defenses in England, will make Germany's attempt at invasion a heartbreaking and bloody task.

I would be the last to minimize the deadly peril in which England finds itself today. But after months of study of England's new army and defenses I am far from pessimistic about the outcome of an invasion.

In the invasion of the low countries and France, Germany could and did bring the full force of her military might to bear. Against England she can bring only a portion. What reaches England must come by water or air. The invasion fleet, both water and air, must face the full force of England's navy, the airforce and strong land defenses.

This, in the simplest terms, means that although Germany may have from four to eight million men under arms she can get only a small percentage to England, unless she is able to establish bridgeheads which she can keep and maintain.

PONDEROUS OBSTACLES

Germany might ultimately be able to starve England out, but a victory by direct assault is filled with those imponderables about which Bismarck used to muse.

The armored divisions have been developed to a high point of efficiency in the same type of "knock-out" units as the German Panzer divisions.

The British Army wasn't defeated in Flanders. It fought a steady withdrawal to the coast to save itself from annihilation.

It is that kind of army that today waits to meet the German invasion.

MORAL EMBARGO ON RUSSIA LIFTED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP)—Prospects for bettered relations with Russia improved today with the lifting of the "moral embargo" which for more than 13 months has kept the Soviets from buying American airplanes or equipment, aluminum and molybdenum.

The embargo's end, however, appeared to be largely a diplomatic gesture, for there were no signs that it would mean a sudden export flood of these items to Soviet ports.

American plane factories already are working night and day to fill urgent orders for this nation's own defense forces, and for export to Britain. No surplus planes for Russian purchase were in sight, nor did there seem any likelihood that aluminum and Molybdenum, vital war metals, could be spared in any quantity.

In addition, all such materials are covered by the export control license system which was established after the "moral embargo" to assure the United States of supplies necessary to its own defense.

However, the Administration's action yesterday in lifting the aviation export ban seemed calculated to place relations between the two nations on a more friendly basis, and remove the diplomatic stigma attached to the moral embargo. Conversations looking to improved Russo-American relations have been in progress for several months.

President Roosevelt announced the "moral embargo" policy Dec. 2, 1939, when he called on manufacturers and exporters to cease selling the designated materials to countries deemed guilty of unprovoked bombing and machine-gunning of civilian populations from the air. It accented American disapproval of the reported Russian tactics in the invasion of Finland.

Secretary of State Hull in his letter yesterday to Constantine Oumansky, the Russian ambassador, wrote he was "happy" to announce that the embargo no longer applied to the U. S. S. R., and that interested American manufacturers and exporters were being notified.

Because of the Administration's frequently expressed aim of helping Britain to the limit in its struggle against the Axis powers, there was speculation in some quarters whether lifting of the Russian embargo might also have the oblique purpose of driving a wedge between Moscow and the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo partners.

Bomb Margate, Buildings Fired

BERLIN, Jan. 22 (AP)—Bombs dropped by a German combat plane today on Margate, at the entrance of the Thames estuary, caused spreading fires and big explosions on the quayside and harbor buildings, informed German sources reported.

Nazi bombers damaged a British freighter so badly she was abandoned by her crew west of Ireland and then sank a tug rushing to aid the vessel, the high command reported.

LONDON, Jan. 22 (AP)—A German plane loosed six bombs on a southeast coast town, officially unidentified, just before daylight today after it had attacked a lifeboat and a house with machine-guns.

A Rockefeller In Army Now

NEW YORK, Jan. 22 (AP) Winthrop Rockefeller, carrying "just pocket change," joined up with the United States Army today as a volunteer.

Winthrop Rockefeller

"I think I'm doing just the right thing," he said when asked how he felt about going into army life.

The doorman at his apartment near Fifth ave. wished him luck when he departed, carrying one bag, to report to his draft board.

Asked there if he liked beans, he said "I sure do," and he added he'd be very grateful for the long underwear the army would issue to him.

His nickname, he said, probably would be "Hey, You!"

The 24-year-old son of John D Rockefeller, Jr., 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighing 210 pounds, was the first volunteer to leave his local draft board. # RAF Bombers Blast Elbasani dawn, bright moonlight bathed the desert.

ATHENS, Jan. 22 (INS)—A terrific British air attack on Italy's Albanian stronghold of Elbasani, where military buildings and railway facilities were blasted by bombs, was announced in Athens today.

The British chose this moment to strike and the assault burst against Tobruk like a bolt of lightning.

The RAF swarmed over the beleaguered town and port, dropping bombs. British warships took up positions and opened up a terrific barrage from the sea, while British ground artillery sent over a withering cross-fire that enveloped Tobruk in a veritable blanket of high explosives.

Into this inferno the British imperial troops advanced, smashing Italian machine gun nests and artillery batteries just as they did before Bardia was captured.

Once inside the outer perimeter, the British had eight miles of broken countryside to cross. They charged over this area and last night the battle was still raging.

Rome Admits Tobruk Defense Is Broken

ROME, Jan. 22 (AP)—The Italian high command acknowledged today that Australian troops, supported by "free French" forces, had broken through the eastern line of Tobruk's defenses after a heavy air, artillery and naval bombardment.

The attack on the Libyan stronghold was carried out by three Australian divisions, reinforced by two regiments of heavy artillery, two armored divisions and motorized formations of "dissident Frenchmen," the daily war bulletin said.

FATAL SHIP CRASH PROBED IN SECRET

In a grim recapitulation, it was disclosed today that had the unfortunate crew of the collision-sunk schooner Mary E. O'Hara thought of, or been able to light a flare, all might have been saved.

A twist of paper, a handkerchief, a piece of shirting—a sudden stab and flicker of light in the bitter night!

Less than a mile distant, it was revealed at a hearing at the U. S. Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, the sea-going tug Montrose rode at anchor as 18 of the O'Hara's crew, numbed and helpless, dropped out of the rigging, one by one, to be swallowed in the sea.

Capt. Robert P. Moon of the tug, the Boston Evening American learned, testified that he and his men knew nothing of the O'Hara's collision with a barge, heard no crash and heard no cries of men as the biting wind whined off Graves Light and Finn's Ledge.

LOST MAN OVERBOARD

According to Capt. Moon he brought up a tow of three coal-laden barges from Philadelphia and anchored them for the fateful night off the fairway channel inside the Graves.

The barges were the Winifred Sheridan, the F. J. Bradley and the L. & W. B. C. C. (Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Co.) No. 7.

They were anchored off the channel in a northerly direction the tug captain said, to wait for morning light and to keep out of night traffic—dangerous to barge-towing. Then the Montrose tug hove to in the vicinity of the barges.

Only with the coming of daylight did he learn, he said, that the Winifred Sheridan barge had been struck by something during the night and that, two hours before that, the Bradley barge had lost a man overboard when he slipped while adjusting a hawser.

CRASH AVERTED

Meanwhile, as the closed hearing progressed, there were persistent reports at Boston Fish Pier that the captain of another fishing craft had narrowly missed colliding with a barge, in the channel, not long after the time set as that of the Mary E. O'Hara accident.

This captain, it is understood, will be called upon by Capt. Fred S. Walker of the federal board to appear and give testimony.

The probe went on while Coast Guard planes and a fleet of small vessels scanned the harbor wastes from Finn's Ledge to the Graves, and south to Minot's light, for trace of bodies of the victims.

At the same time, salvage operations conducted by O'Hara Bros., Inc., owners of the lost schooner, started from a lighter of the Bay State Dredging Co.

With acetylene torch equipment designed for under-water use, a diver prepared to descend 50 feet to the sunken vessel in an effort to cut his way through wreckage to the interior.

Rescue workers expressed the opinion that several of the missing fishermen were trapped in their bunks when the Mary E. O'Hara went down, three minutes after colliding with the coal barge.

BODY RECOVERED

Approximately half of the ill-fated crew, thinly clad and still sleepy, had clambered to the rigging of the two-masted fishing boat as she started to settle. One by one, as the ship went lower, the men disappeared.

One of the last to drop into the icy water was John Sheen, 43, of Eastern ave., Gloucester, whose body was recovered more than a mile from the scene, by crew members of the cutter Algonquin near Graves Light.

Federal inspectors took detailed reports during the night from members of the barge crew and the five men rescued from the O'Hara, Stanley Conrad, Frank Silva, Gabriel Welch, Charles Crowell and Cecil J. Larkin.

Also questioned were Capt. Lars Lunde and crew members of the fishing boat North Star, first to discover the tragedy. It was Capt. Lunde who removed the five surviving men from the ice-coated rigging and radioed a distress signal to the Coast Guard.

SEEK FACTS

Officials were especially concerned with the positions of the two vessels at the time of the crash and endeavored to learn how the collision could have occured without being known by men on the barge.

It was pointed out that some more lives could possibly have been saved if the fishing boat had remained near the barge instead of pulling away in a dash for shallow water.

Capt. O. B. Borgeson, veteran inspector, made a trip to the outer harbor to view the scene, marked now by buoys and one of the sunken boat's masts.

Opinion that the barge was anchored outside the entrance of the North Channel was expressed by Capt. Lawrence H. Dunn, harbormaster, after a study of charts.

He said that statements by the rescued men at City Hospital indicated the barge Sheridan, as well as two other barges, Bradley and Montrose, were showing lights at the time of the mishap.

HEARINGS DUE

After the various reports and statements have been collected by investigators, an "A" board of inquiry will hold hearings concerning the crash.

Members of the board will be Capt. Charles M. Lyons, supervising inspector of the Marine Inspection Service; Capt. Thomas A. Shanleu, Boston district Coast Guard commander, and a representative from the U. S. attorney-general's office in Washington.

Out of the confusion of names of the O'Hara's crew lost, the company today declared definitely that they numbered 18 and that the victims did not include any Santos, Wheeler or Olsen.

Snoring Plea Stumps Former Lawson Aide

Everything happens to Joe Cahalan. The one-time assistant secretary to Thomas W. Lawson ran a marathon race in 1907 and blew a fuse, had 17 operations in six years and since has been doing very well with a synthetic set of plumbing.

Lots of other things have happened to Joe Cahalan, who now is secretary in the health department, but today he was stumped for a while when a little old lady demanded that he stop the snoring on Beacon Hill.

She was about 75 and she was dressed in black when she walked into his office in City Hall Annex and sat down very primly.

For years, she said, she has been a resident of Beacon Hill but now things are unbearable. Recently an apartment houses has gone up near her home and she can get no sleep.

Everybody in the apartment house snores, she said. Through their open windows comes a weird cacophony of nasal and gutterals as the weary apartment dwellers saw nocturnal wood.

She wanted a law to compel everybody to close their windows—to have doctors inspect everybody and if the subjects have tonsils—better than the finest woodwind for respiratory runs in slumber—the law would require that the tonsils come out.

Well, Joe pondered for a while and then said he was afraid the city could do nothing about it. So, in quite dignified manner yet, she gathered up her skirts and swept out of the office, asserting that she would sell her home and move elsewhere.

Cargo Ship Bill Sent to House

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (INS)—An Administration bill to provide funds to finance an emergency $350,000,000 cargo shipbuilding program was reported favorably to the House by its appropriations committee today.

At the same time, the committee revealed that Rear Admiral Emory Land (retired), chairman of the U. S. Maritime Commission, declared at a hearing Saturday that "we would not be building these ships if we thought the war would be stopped today."

Land made a statement behind closed doors when Rep. Johnson (D.) of West Virginia asked him whether the U. S. would need the additional cargo vessels if the war were to end "soon."

"But when you say that," Land added, "you have to give me the date."

If the Axis powers were to win the war, Land told the committee the United States would need "a great many more" cargo ships than the 200 which would be constructed under the bill. If England should win the conflict, he added, the United States would not need the ships immediately, but might "in the near future."

3-Day Quincy Bride Pleads Guilty in Theft

The honeymoon of Mrs. Dorothy Bouchie, 20, of Winter st., Quincy Point, bride of three days, was interrupted today when she pleaded guilty to complaints charging the larceny of two reversible overcoats in Quincy district court.

"She wanted to have new clothes like other girls," Special Officer Ernest Hodge informed Judge Gertrude Halloran the girl told him when arrested at the honeymoon cottage today.

Last Saturday night the girl became the bride of Ernest Bouchie, 22, an unemployed shipyard worker, in the rectory of St. Joseph's Church, Quincy Point.

According to police, the young bride stole one coat Dec. 5 from a locker in the Quincy high school, later found in St. John's Church; and took the second coat, found on her person when arrested, from Coddington school.

Judge Halloran gave the bride probation for one year. The honeymoon couple left the courtroom together without comment.

PILOT'S BATTLE FOR BRITAIN

Diary of the Last 15 Days in Life of RAF Ace

These are excerpts from the diary of a Royal Air Force fighter pilot. The diary ends abruptly after 15 entries—for the pilot was shot down and killed in combat. Before he met his death, this anonymous youth had destroyed six German aircraft, damaged a number of others, and had been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for gallantry. The diary was made public by the British air ministry. The diary was secured for publication by the Associated Press Feature Service.

FIRST DAY—(Sept. 2, 1940.) First day at our new station. Leapt from our virgin couches at 0650. This shook me a bit. Was still slightly dopey when at 15,000 feet we sighted a large lump of blitz. Solid block of 20 Dornier 215s with a large fighter escort. Attacked en masse, then dived away as fighters came down. Joined Butch again after a frantic tail-watching break-away, and started after the bombers again.

Suddenly we see a Dornier coming towards us—running for home. We jump on it—Butch sits on its tail, pumping lead at it. I do quarter attacks. He doesn't like this, lumps fall off and smoke pours out. I am awake now and feeling hungry.

Butch says, "Don't waste any more ammunition on him; this guy's finished."

RUDDERS IN RIBBONS

I say "Okay, Bud" and formate on the Dornier as he heads for Rochford (small town in Essex). He is a wreck—rudders in ribbons and pieces falling off all the time.

One guy comes out at 100 feet. Parachute streams as he hits the ground—bounces. Butch and I are very cocky, go home and shoot a horrid line.

Two more quick sorties seeing nothing, and then more blitzkrieg on the fourth do.

We run into a whole pile of Messerschmitt 110s and Dorniers. Too far to attack the bombers, so we start mixing it with the 110s. They circle and a bit come down vertically behind us.

ENGINE, WING ABLAZE

I lose Butch and everyone else as I turn round and round, watching my tail. Then a 110 rears up in front of me, plain view, and does a steep turn.

Range is almost point-blank as I turn inside and plug him. He disappears under my nose and, when I see him again, he is diving vertically, starboard engine and wing blazing.

I feel very cocky again, look for the fight and find it is out of sight. I go home and find that I've only fired 300 rounds.

SECOND DAY (Sept. 3, 1940)—Unsuccessful day—made no contact.

THIRD DAY—Two patrols—0920 and 1230—but no contact made and no fun at all. Just roaming round looking for the "Hun in the Sun." Watched night bombers in the dark, parachute flares and A.A. bursts all over the sky. Slept well.

FOURTH DAY—Another big day. Over Thameshaven we meet 25 bombers and scores of Messerschmitt 109s. Fired at a Dornier 215, but had to break away when fighters came down en masse.

Chased bombers for 10 minutes, but couldn't catch up. Came home and found Butch had bailed out and landed in a garden, where a terrified woman looked at him and then ran into the house. No more action today.

LEFT FOE TO BURN

FIFTH DAY—Up in the morning over the Thames estuary to meet another raid. We nip in before the Hun fighters can get at us and do a quick flank attack. Fighters follow at once. I follow behind the bombers, watching two Messerschmidt 109s coming up behind me.

Before they get into range I turn a sharp left and whip under them. Unfortunately C——, who is following me, gets plugged by one of these guys and has to crash-land.

I get into a circle with two 109s and shoot at the second. He starts to dive, so I chase him. Third burst sets him on fire, whole of starboard wing and fuselage. We are down to 50 feet, so I leave him to burn and climb to 10,000 feet at full bore.

"The third burst sets him on fire."

Fighting is still going on and two more 109s come for me. They work in pairs and it seems fairly easy to get No. 2. Again I pick him out and we tear down to 0 feet. We race along the Pilgrim's Way (Chaucer's old road to Canterbury) and I fire the rest of my ammunition into him.

Both radiators stream glycol and I can smell him burning. I formate on him when I finish my rounds and he has his oxygen mask off, looking out at me. I leave him to go home and see him crash-land a few miles on.

SIGHTS PARACHUTE

Going home I see a parachute and circle it—a British one. Later it turns out that it was the C. O. who got shot down by the 109s.

In the evening a party, then on to a dance with the boys of another squadron. Slept at —— and stayed in bed till 9!

SIXTH DAY (Sept. 7, 1940)—I have the rest of the day off—and a very good thing too. Suadron gets into big London raids and loses quite a few. F—— died in hospital. W—— missing, several more shot down and bailed out. S—— and I drove down to Maidstone Hospital to pick up the C.O. Coming back we get to the Blackwall Tunnel (connecting North and South London under the Thames) when the trouble starts raining down all round us—no time to get to a shelter.

We stand under an arch and watch the bombers approaching in waves, hear the bombs whistle down, and then the explosions.

FIRE BOMB SHOWER

Molotoff breadbasket showers incendiaries around us, several in gasworks, which fortunately does not go up. Watch cockneys put out one incendiary, discover a gloomy type leaning against a lamp post who discloses he is waiting for pub to open!

The C. O. feels a bit hard-done by as he's been shot down and wounded yesterday, then gets bombed today. S—— drives like a demon along a street and skids to a stop. Bus driver pulls up beside us and says, "Come on nah, turn it up mate, you're on the blinkin' floor this time!" Laughter mingles with bomb crashes.

Go back in the dark via Hampstead Heath. Fires light up London and fire engines are coming from all the suburbs into docks. Stop at pub just outside Edmonton and get a riotous reception and lots of beer from excited public bar. I shake hands with everybody and get quite merry.

SEVENTH DAY — One short sortie in the evening but saw nothing at all.

EIGHTH DAY—Again no engagement. On patrol with another squadron, we see 109s high above us, but they won't come and play. Wrote some letters.

• • •

NINTH DAY — Cloudy day. Blessed relief and lots of sleeping during the day. Went up and did cloud flying.

TENTH DAY—First sortie in the morning brought us headon into a bunch of Heinkel 111s. I do such a violent breakaway that I do an inverted spin. I lose 5000 to 6000 feet before I can get out of it. Can't find the fight at all after that, so I go home fed up. All set to get my own back at the second do but all we see are one or two 109s miles away. No fun.

• • •

ELEVENTH DAY - Another cloudy day and patrolling in ones and twos to try cloud interceptions.

TWELFTH DAY Thirteenth and a Friday. More cloud flying expeditions and everybody very testy about it. Went to B——'s house about 22.00. Bombing and A. A. fire all the time, as it was a beautiful night.

THIRTEENTH DAY—A trip down into Sussex with another squadron and saw more of our fighters than I've ever seen before. I got attacked twice, and everybody split up and came home singly or in pairs. Those attacking me must have been 113s, but every time I went to attack what I thought were these guys, they were Spitfires! Mostly foxing!

FOURTEENTH DAY (Sept. 15, 1940)—The best day we've had. We go off at lunchtime with another squadron to meet 16 Dorniers and lots of 109s. We go into the bombers, but Butch breaks early as he gets hit. I break with him, lose him, then go for the bombers again.

Meet them coming home and no Messerschmitts in sight. So I attack one on the edge of the formation. Get him straight away and he leaves the rest of his boys. Follow him, plugging all the time. A quarter attack comes off beautifully, see bullets going in, in a line from the nose back to the tail, at intervals of a foot all the way down.

See that rear-gunner is lying back in his seat, probably dead. Dornier is smoking like a chimney, can smell it from behind, oil comes back on to my aircraft and pieces fly past me.

PILOT BAILS OUT

Then three blasted Spitfires horn in and drive me away from my own private and personal Dornier. One guy bails out from the Jerry. He has his arms folded and seems quite resigned. His ship crashes in flames and Spitfires shoot a line all around it, probably dropping visiting cards.

I did this myself. "See you in brasserie 8:30 Saturday" kind of thing. They're getting quite a reputation for pinching a bomber when a Hurricane has got it on the run. So I go home first and claim it before they can.

Afternoon brings even better pickings. Again we attack Dornier formation and break it wide open. They scatter all over the sky and go for the clouds. I get one straight away with a long burst. He catches fire and goes straight in.

CANNON MISSES

Chase another in and out of clouds. Port engine catches fire and Butch and I claim him as a probable; damn sure he was finished.

Then I see two Messerschmitt 109s behind me and whip around in a left hand climbing turn. Horrid moment as I see his cannon winking at me, but he misses. Turn and start circling with the two of them. Gradually tighten the turn till I get a shot at number two from above. See my bullets hit his left wing and he is so shaken he dives into a cloud.

Chase these two again and lose them. Then see two fighters coming straight for me. I think they're Spitfires so I don't fire. Dodge under them and find they are the same two yellow-nosed Messerschmitts! Annoying because they make off and I can't catch them.

Most successful day for the squadron, a bag of 10, destroyed, 13 probable, and others damaged. Our losses—nil. My bag—two destroyed, one probable and one damaged. Beginning to shoot a bit of a line. Celebration in the evening.

FIFTEENTH DAY—Scrambled out of bed in absolute confusion. Cloudy up to 20,000 and mighty cold. We see dozens of Vortices but no enemy aircraft.

Here the diary entries end. A few hours later its author had been killed when his Hurricane crashed in battle.

Austen Lake Interviews Canadian Pilots in RAF

This diary is a worthy prologue for a really great series of stories that will begin in next Monday's Boston American.

For the first time the stories of these heroes are told in their own words.

Turks Mass Army in Thrace

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Jan. 22 (AP)—The official Turkish wireless announced that the government "has gathered a great part of its army in Thrace (European Turkey), where it awaits any possible action."

Discussing the possibility of a German invasion across the Balkans the radio said:

"Those who attack our steel fortress of Thrace are doomed to fail in the attempt! Turkey fought on eight fronts in the last war—no one should doubt her ability to fight on one front alone. Those who want to beat their heads on the rock may do so."

RUMANIA RIOTING QUELLED

By GEORGE BALINT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

BUDAPEST, Jan. 22 (INS)—Premier Ion Antonescu apparently succeeded today in establishing an ironclad military dictatorship over most of Rumania.

Latest reports received here indicated that most of the bloody crushe, and Iron Guardist riots that swept Rumania had been halted.

Early today Rumanian troops occupied the Bucharest radio station, arresting defiant Iron Guardists who had seized the building after a series of violent assaults.

Last night it was revealed, Rumanian Vice Premier Nona Sima, leader of the Iron Guards, flew to Berlin to "receive instructions from the German government." The Germans were represented as "disappointed" by this new outbreak of Iron Guard anarchy.

Antonescue appeared to be gaining the upper hand in restoring order after battles raged in Bucharest between Rumanian troops and hundreds of "dissident" Iron Guardists.

In the provinces Communists were reported involved in the fighting, which grew out of the murder of Major Doehring, German general staff officer, on Monday.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, reported that a 31-year-old Turkish-born Greek citizen named Sarandoz was executed yesterday in Bucharest for the slaying. He was tried by a military court.—Editor's Note.

This morning reports to Budapest told of rapidly spreading anarchy in Rumania, and "complete disorganization" of all economic activities.

Everywhere, it was stated, the Rumanian army was seizing power, throwing out Iron Guardists who were described as "no longer masters of the situation."

MARX BROTHERS' NEW FILM UNREELS HERE TOMORROW

JUNE MacLOY and Groucho Marx as they appear in "Go West," the wild and woolly Western, opening on Paramount and Fenway screens tomorrow.

'Go West' Heads Program At Paramount and Fenway

Presenting the Marx Brothers—Groucho, Chico and Harpo—in their first "period picture," "Go West," a wild and woolly comedy laid in the 1850 outdoors, on the Paramount and Fenway screens, starting tomorrow.

The Marxes say this is their epic Western to end all Westerns. It is the first time anyone has ever poked fun at the big bad men, hardboiled sirens, lovely heroines and brave heroes of the early West.

To help things along, the Marxes don pioneer-day costumes, revamped to suit their own ideas.

They are aided in their fun and excitement by a stellar cast which includes John Carroll, Diana Lewis, Walter Woolf King and Ronert Barrat. These were put through laugh paces by Director Edward Buzzell, and the picture was produced by Jack Cummings.

The film is full of music, with a piano solo by Chico, harp number by Harpo, songs by Carroll and Miss Lewis, comedy yodeling by Groucho and a fast "Can-Can" dance by a group of chorines.

The story is all about the three Marxes' adventures when they go West to look for gold in Colorado and find that a group of villains are conspiring to rob the hero and heroine of a deed to some land the railroad wants. They leap into the plot, and the fun never stops until the whole cast winds up racing wildly over a fast-moving early American train.

"Haunted Honeymoon," the second feature, stars Robert Montgomery in the role of a popular detective fiction character, Lord Peter Wimsey. Supporting players include Constance Cummings, Leslie Banks and Sir Seymour Hicks.

Added Met Feature 'Christmas Under Fire'

"Christmas Under Fire," sensational Warner Brothers short subject narrated by the famous war correspondent, Quentin Reynolds, will be an added feature on the new program opening tomorrow at the Metropolitan Theater.

Top attraction on the new bill will be Joseph Conrads' "Victory," co-starring Fredric March and Betty Field. The new Aldrich Family picture "Life With Henry," with Jackie Cooper and Leila Ernst, will be the companion film.

U. S. Parachute Troops in Training for War

Here's a Close-Up of a Plunge Into Space

Unit of Battle

These three pictures, left, above and right, help to show the grim business that aerial warfare has become under German auspices. During the World War, only spies were dropped behind enemy lines . . . but today tumbling out of the sky (left and above) are machine-gun troopers at right, each unit setting up its own nest under the pistol guard of specialized troopers.

All Out—Over the testing ground, three members of the Battalion leave the transport plane in a mass jump. The 'chute of the first man is just starting to open, the taut static line on the second is ripping off the chute cover, and the third man is just stepping into space. Now, upper right . . .

The Attack—One phase of the warfare in which parachutists drop behind enemy lines is shown here . . . with dummies acting as decoys while the human 'chutists drop to the ground where they set up machine guns and push the attack. This is one of the first pictures showing the U. S. Army practicing its parachute troop technique. Now, far left below . . .

More Troops for Training—Like a grammar school in aerial warfare, classes follow classes . . . beginners like these taking the places of the more advanced students. So, Uncle Sam is developing one of the most potent parachute battalions in the world.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S inaugural address was a thoughtful, sincere and altogether constructive document, thoroughly in keeping with a solemn occasion and with the democratic traditions of the country.

It had the merit of high idealism.

It had the virtue of reasonable brevity.

And it appropriately held aloof from the uncertainties of issue, interest and opinion that divide us as a people, and earnestly affirmed the principles that unite us and keep us strong.

The President was under the necessity of bridging with words the chasm of coming events which it is his responsibility to bridge ultimately with acts and facts, and he did this admirably, hopefully and well.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke with great courage, and it is good to have this evidence of courage in our highest American leadership at this fateful time.

He spoke with abiding faith in the democratic future of America, and it is good that faith abides in the man destined to shape and guide our national course in the trying days to come.

THE BEST KEY to Mr. Roosevelt's state of mind as he sought for words with which to assure and comfort and inspire his people was the Biblical passage on which his hand rested as he took the oath of office.

"And now faith, hope and charity, these three, but the greatest of these is charity."

This is one of the most beautiful passages in all Christian text, the concluding paragraph of the Thirteenth Chaper of Paul's First Epistle to the Corinthians, in which it was urged:

"That ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you, but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment."

The background for this adjuration was that the Apostle, Paul, had gone into a land where there was contention and dissatisfaction among the people, and he had set about to unite them with the strength of a common and good purpose.

And he counselled that the requisite for having such purpose was that there must be understanding, tolerance and charity between the people, for:

"Charity suffereth long, and is kind, charity envieth not, charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth."

President Roosevelt could have selected no happier theme for the occasion of his assumption of prolonged responsibilities.

His obvious desire, and certain need, is for an attitude of mind on the part of the American people which will enable him to continue his administration of their affairs with a minimum of conflict and confusion.

He has contributed much to the attainment of that attitude by the manner in which he has addressed the people in his inaugural message.

MR. ROOSEVELT is clearly stirred deeply by the position in which he has been placed. It has caused him to instruct and enlighten himself in the democratic principles and faith of his country.

It has caused him to make his words and acts accord with the deepest spiritual and religious convictions of his people.

These are the essential attributes of a great and successful leader in all human affairs, and especially of a great and good President of our democratic, free and peaceful American people.

It augurs well for our future, and particularly for our immediate, happiness that spiritual values are put so high and phrased so well by the man who holds the most responsible office within the gift of the American people.

THE TRAGIC SINKING of the fishing schooner Mary E. O'Hara, with the loss of 20 members of her crew, profoundly shocks New England.

Thousands of our people realize for the first time in their lives the risks some men take and the dangers they face to keep the Boston area supplied with fish.

Many who had been inclined to believe that the hazards of the Atlantic had disappeared with the whaling industry have changed their minds.

The ocean is still as powerful and overwhelming as it was in the days of Moby Dick.

Nor has time altered or impaired the traditional fortitude of men who spend their lives upon the sea. The stories of the survivors of the Mary E. O'Hara tragedy prove that.

There was no hysteria, no cowardice, no weakness among the men who clung for seemingly endless hours to the icy spars and rigging of the submerged vessel.

They prayed. They spoke simple farewells. And they dropped, one by one, to death in the freezing harbor water.

In this age of ease, softness and luxury, when talk is plentiful and deeds of valor much too rare, we can ill afford to lose such Americans.

"MEN are getting to be worse gossips than women and also just as envious of each other's possessions as women are," says a feminine contemporary. The lady may be right. But is it any wonder men are getting that way when their lives are so greatly dominated by females? First, the mother dominates the lad's unbringing and then he has a feminine school teacher. After that, he is surrounded by females in co-educational high schools and colleges. There are too many women in the life of the average man of today.

-:- MY DAY

WASHINGTON, Tuesday—In thinking over yesterday, the only thing I wish I knew is whether our guests finally succeeded in getting any lunch or tea! That is the one difficult thing about trying to invite all the people whom we would like to see on a day of this kind.

Even as it was, I heard of one or two cases of husbands invited without their wives, and of wives invited without their husbands. They came to the door together, only to find the regulations about each person having their own admittance card had to be enforced.

Had there been anyone who could have identified people from all over the country, these mistakes could have been avoided. But that, of course, was impossible.

I was able to go in for a few minutes last night to the dinner which Mr. Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, gave for its members and for the Democratic State chairman and vice-chairman, who were here. It was a great pleasure to have a glimpse of them all.

THEN I WENT over to hear the last part of the program presented by the inaugural committee and the committee on special entertainment, at a musical by Negro artists in the departmental auditorium. It was a beautiful concert and I was happy to be there for even half of the program.

The children gradually are leaving again. Franklin, Jr., went last night so as to be at work this morning. Johnny and Anne have gone back to Boston, Elliott has started for Wright Field, Ohio, but we are to keep his two children for a little while at least. Jimmy's two children started back today and he will leave tonight.

ONE OF the things that appeals to us all is the training of handicapped children. We are gradually learning that children who are deaf, dumb or handicapped in some other way, can be enormously helped by proper training.

I think, perhaps, we have progressed further in our knowledge of how to help them, than we have in the care of some of our other handicapped groups. This type of education is always expensive and all the institutions serving this group need material help from every person in the community.

On Saturday evening, Jan. 25th, at Town Hall in New York City, the school chorus of the New York Institute For the Education of the Blind will give its second annual concert to raise money for the additions to the school's Braille library.

This chorus of 32 voices will be joined by Lauritz Melchoir, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, whose devotion to this work is enhanced because his sister, who is blind, is a teacher in an institution for the sightless in Copenhagen, Denmark.

EVIE ROBERT SIGNS GUEST BOOK

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—ED FLYNN: This is a story which concerns Evie Robert, whose husband, Chip Robert, was secretary of the National Democratic Committee . . . When the President appeared at the National Women's Press Club this month—an event which attracted much attention, because he had absented himself from the Gridiron Dinner a few days earlier—he was asked to sign the guest book. Eleanor Roosevelt then was asked to sign, and she wrote her autograph four lines underneath the President's. The club was so proud of having this remarkable record of the presence of the Chief Executive and the First Lady that the autographed page was ordered set in a gold frame. It was shown to Evie Robert, who impulsively signed her name between those of Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt . . . The distraught officers thereupon phoned the Library of Congress and secured the services of the best ink eradicator there to obliterate Mrs. Robert's name.

HANNAH WILLIAMS

JACK DEMPSEY is waiving the provision of his separation agreement with Hannah Williams which banned her from working in any night clubs . . . WILLIAM GREEN: Ralph Whitehead, whose Actors' Federation almost caused a lieup of the entertainment industry in America two years ago, now is in Florida organizing the dog tracks . . . GENERAL MARSHALL: Carl Laemmle, Jr., is too short to be drafted, but wants to do his duty. Dorothy Parker suggested that he fight for inclusion in the draft, on the grounds that he has rising arches . . . LOU NOVA: Billy Conn has been offered $5000 to appear in a movie by Republic Pictures. The handsome Conn, who goes to the movies twice a day, told them: "I'm interested only in SEEING pictures—not MAKING them" . . . MUSICIANS' UNION: Teddy I well, the band leader, has had his draft number called. He told the board that he was claiming 17 dependents—the members of his orchestra. "Don't worry," the board assured him: "We'll take them, too."

MARIAN ANDERSON: Winthrop Rockefeller went to Cafe Society last week and saw the Golden Gate Quartette, which Sunday night sang in Constitution Hall. He'll try to employ them, either for the Rainbow Room or private functions . . . THE HOYLE CLUB: Harry Kurnitz, the screen writer, was a winner at a poker game in which Clifford Odets lost. "The trouble with Odets at poker," Kurnitz said, "is that he thinks each hand is determined on intellectual merits" . . . BEN BERNIE: Your former vaudeville partner, Phil Baker, is completing a symphony for accordion, and will enter it in the Juilliard Musical Foundation's competition . . . JOE MARTIN: When Eleanor Roosevelt attended the Common Sense dinner last Thursday she confessed: "This is the first time in my experience that I've heard no criticism of the New Deal among the guests" . . . BORIS KARLOFF: A group of Hollywood movie writers gathered at the home of Russell Gleason and began to describe the most horrible scenes from the most horrible pictures they ever had seen. Mrs. Gleason began telling the guests about her favorite horror shot in a movie. She suddenly stopped, looked around at all the film writers and said: "Stop me, boys, if you wrote this one."

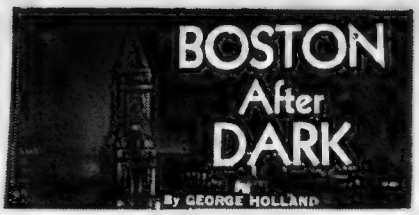
BMI: The current radio battle has resulted in a new idea for song plugging. A thousand military-band orchestrations have been made of Cole Porter's "Let's Be Buddies" and distributed to Army posts throughout the country. Porter is supervising the making of lantern slides of the song's lyrics . . . SIGNAL CORPS: The British Army provided a special car for Sir Harry Lauder with which he could tour the Army camps. A special bugle call was written for him, so that when the soldiers would hear it they'd know Lauder was coming to entertain them. But the bugle call was eliminated, because it brought not only the congregation of soldiers but also two air raids . . . EDITOR, MANUAL OF ARMS: Jimmy and Elliott Roosevelt wore their uniforms Sunday night and saluted each other . . . JOSEPH E. DAVIES: At the Algonquin Saturday afternoon, Louis Nizer saw Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger and Eleanor Roosevelt. They complimented him upon his book, "Thinking on Your Feet." The author felt embarrassed at this effusive praise and changed the subject: "Are you planning to be in town for a while?" he asked them . . . "Oh, no," replied Anna Roosevelt Boettiger. "We have to be in Washington on Monday to attend a certain Family Event."



EXCLUSIVE: The relaxed Army-Boston College gridiron feud has an excellent chance of being revived . . . Coach Earl "Red" Blaik carried (from the hills of Hanover to the plains of the Point) a burning peeve against Ivy League methods, although Dartmouth College itself is not an object of Coach Blaik's ire.

UNDER DISCUSSION at West Point is a policy of making the Army's future schedules—starting, say, in the fall of '43—considerably more embrasive than they have been in past years . . . Instead of five or six Ivy League institutions, Boston College and at least one prominent Southern school, and another from Texas are likely to be substituted.

IF HARVAID CONTINUES to de-emphasize while the Army is emphasizing the great American college game—for purposes of propaganda if nothing else—you may expect a prolonged discussion of the whys and wherefores of it all.

AND IF THE ANSWER to "Wherefore art thou, Harvard?"—to paraphrase Will Shakespeare—is not satisfactory, the annual Harvard-Army game spectacle may well become an item of history . . . If Boston had that stadium the schedule-making of John Curley, of University Heights, would be much, much simpler.

THE SWITCH of the Metropolitan Opera to the Metropolitan Theater, foretold in this column Sunday, came to pass exactly one day after the forecast . . . There's a much fuller story of the startling business in the keeping of Mrs. Anita Davis Chase or Wendell Endicott, of the Boston Opera House Association. (Who are not ready yet—to talk!)

A HALF-DOZEN MONTREAL newspapermen came to Boston for the "sneak preview" of a motion-picture last night . . . It was the first junket in which Canadian newspapermen converged on Boston as a focal point for such a frivolous purpose . . . Of the three representatives of the English-speaking newspapers in Montreal, one of them, Andy O'Brien of the Standard, was not too pre-occupied to smile . . . If a "star" reporter in the erstwhile Paris of the North escapes with twenty-five Canadian dollars a week, after taxes and deductions, he is doing very well these days, according to first-hand reports . . . In prospect for the Boston movie critics is a pleasant junket, thoughtfully planned by Universal . . . The boys and girls will be transported to Miami to preview "Back Street."

THE GRAPH OF KATIE HEPBURN'S life and loves is certainly a fluctuating one . . . By her own enterprise, Katie unearthed a play by Phil Barry which fitted her perfectly, and as "The Philadelphia Story" it will be playing a return Boston engagement February 3 . . . Katharine was on the shelf—good and high on an upper shelf—when she decided to buy a play for herself . . .

SINCE THEN SHE HAS AMASSED a pile of hundred thousand dollar notes for her inspiration . . . Her fee for playing the role in pictures was $150,000,

KATHARINE HEPBURN

and she has a sharing arrangement on the gross . . . The play was a clean-up, too, and Katie owned most of the profits accruing from a long Broadway run . . . And, then! The doctor's daughter from Connecticut fell in love . . .

NEITHER SHE NOR THE YOUNG MAN in the case have admitted that their affection for one another is as deep an emotion as true love . . . But circumstantial evidence and the testimony of friends makes it fact enough for us . . . Word from a very reputable Hollywood scout tells us that the wedding was not too remote . . . But the man, Garson Kanin, the directorial bombshell, has been drafted.

OUT OF ACADEMY AWARD RACE

By Louella O. Parsons

Walt Disney

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 22—Walt Disney is out of the Academy Award race this year. Walt, who romped home with five Oscars in a row for his silly symphonies, will not even be represented when the 1940 statuettes are handed out. This is interesting news to all makers of short subjects, who have come to believe that there wasn't a chance to compete with Disney. Well, this year the shorts field is wide open for not a single Disney film will be placed in competition.

Walt's representative, Gunther Lessing, explained the reason why Disney is not competing for honors. He said they made no silly symphonies because all of their best artists were at work on "Fantasia." Disney has three features coming out in 1941 and because of the large expenditure he believes it is important to focus public attention on his feature productions such as "Fantasia."

NANCY KELLY

Walt says, however, his decision must not be construed as in any way reflecting an antagonistic attitude toward the Academy.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD: The newest-twosome in town is Nancy Kelly and John Carroll, but don't take it too seriously—John isn't in a marrying mood; keep your eye on Alice Faye and Charles Wrightsman, Texas oil man. It is the first time Alice has been really serious since she and Tony Martin parted. They were at the Mocambo and Ciro's . . . Kenny Baker, orchestra leader, and Dorothea Kent, are pricing wedding rings; Pat Morison won the Santa Anita Sweepstakes hat prize at the Mocambo. Ruth Hussey, who will wed Raphael Hakim very soon, was with Ida Lupino and Louis Hayward at the Scheherazade; wonder what has happened to Harry Ritz's romance with Betty Heath? He was stepping out with Dorothy Fredrickson.

Accounts of the party Milton Berle gave for his brother in New York, show that a good time was had by all; Gloria Swanson is seriously considering coming to Hollywood for two pictures; Bill Holden's draft number comes up in April.

Wonder what Brenda Marshall will do? Cesar Romero, who lost pounds after he had the flu, has gone to Victorville for a rest; the Pat O'Briens celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary with a big party; Artie Shaw and Betty Asher, with eyes only for each other, lunching at the Brown Derby.

Oscar Levant arrived in town for a role in "Kiss the Boys Goodbye." Maybe he'll be better in his second movie.

Attention motorists! Marjorie Main has bought a car—and is learning to drive.

NEVER LET IT BE SAID that Hollywood doesn't turn the other cheek, for after the first excitement died down Robert Montgomery's blast against the industry didn't hurt him in the slightest. He is thriving like the proverbial Green Bay tree with two companies asking for him.

Columbia has requested Montgomery for "Bedtime Story" while Universal is asking that M-G-M lend their problem child for the Irene Dunne picture "Unfinished Business." It seems M-G-M owes Universal a star on an old deal.

In spite of Bob's low opinion of Hollywood art, he and Irene would be a good team at the box-office and with Gregory Lacava directing, even the critical Mr. Montgomery couldn't find fault.

Ben Hecht once said, "The best way to feather your nest in Hollywood is to take a crack at the movies." Maybe he is right—and then again he may be wrong.

"FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT" was one of the big box-office hits of the year and put Walter Wanger right back on top as a producer. So today it was interesting to hear that Walter has just purchased "Sundown" which starts serially in a national magazine this week, for immediate filming.

Barre Lyndon, who authored the yarn, isn't new to the movies. Though in his early 40s he's authored such hits as "The Amazing Doctor Clitterhouse" and "The Man in Half Moon Street." Incidentally the ink wasn't dry on the story purchase before Wanger wired Lyndon to come to Hollywood to work on the script of his adventure tale of the life of white men in modern Africa.

Waterless Cold Cream

By ARLINE GOULD

YOU HAVE a right, actually, to demand a great deal from a cleansing cream . . . if you choose the right one. And a new cleanser we've discovered is so unique, so different, that it's no wonder it exceeds all expectations in what it does!

Its first (among many) claims to real quality is the fact that no water is used in its formula . . . and that is a hallmark of the finest tissue creams. This cleanser is as rich in oils as a tissue cream, for that matter, and because of its unquestioned ability to "draw" subsurface grime and impurities out can and should be used by oily as well as dry skin!

An oily skin acts like a sponge in atmosphere that's filled with winter soot, and absorbs so much that the only answer to its riddance is such a super-powered cleanser . . . its action is so swift and penetrating that there is no need to consider the usual maxim of a non-oily cream for an oily skin.

In it is a rather rare ingredient . . . rare for a cleansing cream . . . and that is cholesterol, another tissue-building standby. This is combined with other oils on a base of Russian mineral oil, highly soothing and beneficial.

In spite of the high oil content this cleansing cream is so blended that it is very light and melts at body temperature.

You'll be surprised and delighted by the price . . . the cleansing cream is only $1.10 . . . and so inexpensive for a really effective midwinter aid!

If you'd like complete information on this unique cleansing cream, phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week-days except Saturday, or write, care of the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

GOOD resolutions—we've all made a long list of them. But there's still one which I'd like to hand to every American female regardless of age, size, creed or nail enamel. Just this and nothing more, girls—LAY OFF THE LADY FRIENDS!

Mind you, I've nothing against real ladies or real friends. There's nothing finer, nothing more helpful in trouble, more comforting in grief, more delightful in times of joy than a wise, gentle, kindly woman with a sense of humor and plenty of spunk and common sense. And, glory be! the woods are full of such grand humans.

But the woods are also filled with an entirely different breed who are I am assured, responsible for nine tenths of our domestic turmoil.

HUNDREDS of letters arrive at this desk weekly. Mad letters. Sad letters. Shocked, grieved, troubled up-in-the-air letters. All of them implying a lot of grief for a lot of people. And three-quarters of 'em caused by some meddling lady friend.

Unless you know 'em, you wouldn't say there was a thing wrong with these nosy gals. They're seemingly intelligent, amiable, well mannered, nicely groomed, civilized human beings—an ornament to any family gathering or bridge table.

But just let any little trouble start between the Misses and the Old Man, and away goes their deceptive veneer of civilization—and forthwith they make the most bloodthirsty Zulu or Fiji Islander look like a piffling piker.

Much has been moaned concerning the "destructive forces which are undermining our sacred American homes." But—take it from one who knows, stranger—when it comes to undermining, one frail, soft-voiced, meek-mousy little Lady Friend can do more damage in five minutes than a whole wrecking crew could in a month.

Nor does she need any specific facts to work on. Just give her one male, one female—and she'll do the rest. Has dad been caught red handed in crime? Not necessarily. Is there even a shred of tangible evidence against him? Probably not. Has he ever abused the missus—betrayed her—insulted her—deprived her of her natural rights? Never.

But what of it? All such questions are entirely irrelevant. According to all professional lady friends every man is a dirty dog and every woman a poor dear darling victim. And given the slightest chance, they proceed to take sides and raise Cain accordingly.

HOW DO THEY get that way? For a variety of reasons—all highly satisfying to such lady friends.

First—they get a kick out of it. And there's nothing that the average idle, lazy, nitwit female wants more eagerly or constantly than some kind, any kind, of excitement.

Second—their craving for excitement is only equalled by their yen for the spotlight. The more ructions they raise, the more important they make themselves appear.

So, naturally, they're simply tickled pink if they can magnify a simple breakfast table spat into a full-sized divorce suit, with three columns of front page news, complete custody and ample alimony.

That look of grim resignation—broadcasting to the stagfare that his partner doesn't know how to dance! She gets so nervous when he tries a simple foxtrot variation that she's poker-stiff.

Let's hope that your partner's feel differently about YOU, that they wear a look of proud delight telling the world you're a grand dancer.

When you know the steps really well, there's no danger of stiffening up with nervousness when you step out on the dance floor. You stay light as a feather, easily follow your partner from one smart variation to another.

Try our diagram for the Hesitation Point in the ever popular fox-trot. It's a step you'll use often for marking time on crowded floors.

Count 1—Step forward on left foot. 2—Swing right leg forward touch toe lightly to floor. 3—Step back on right foot. 4—Swing left leg back; touch toe lightly to floor. Easy, isn't it?

But no man can expect a girl to follow him if he's a wishy-washy leader! To lead into the Hesitation Point, the man should definitely stop his partner with his right hand, then pull her toward him.

And if he'd be a popular beau for dances, he has to be up on his steps, too. No just dancing old favorites like the waltz—and sitting out the smart Conga.

Our 40-page booklet, Teach Yourself the Latest Dance Steps, gives instructions and footprint diagrams for the rumba, Conga, tango, Lindy Hop and Peabody, as well as for the waltz, fox-trot, Westchester and shag. Includes basic steps, variations, shows how to combine steps. Has do's and don'ts, tips on leading and following.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, Teach Yourself the Latest Dance Steps to Boston Evening American Home Institute, 109 West 19th st., New York, N. Y.

BOSTON BABIES are doing their bit to help England win the war . . . And, strange as it may seem, all they have to do about it is sit . . . Yet their contribution to the British War Relief funds has amounted to a tidy sum . . .

Like the proverbial acorn, the story behind their contribution grew from an idea Mrs. Franklin Hammond, Jr., had a couple of months ago . . .

So many of her friends liked the crayon drawing she made of her own baby that she put it on exhibition in a store in Cambridge with a sign saying that she would take orders for drawings of children and donate the proceeds to British War Relief.

In no time this clever young artist had more orders than she could handle and she netted a handsome sum to send overseas to help little British children . . .

Last winter Mrs. Hammond, the former Catharine Hedge, was chairman of the Junior League Art Gallery and gave a number of youthful artists an opportunity to exhibit their work there.

This year, since her drawings have become so successful, her successor at the gallery, Margaret Farnsworth, encouraged her to hold an exhibit of her own work, so she is now winning the admiration of many friends and art connoisseurs at her first one-man show . . .

The exhibit opened at the League yesterday with a private view and sherry party . . . The attractive young artist, wearing a simple black-tucked crepe dress, camellia corsage and fur-trimmed hat, was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. Henry Hedge, who was also dressed in modish black . . .

Youngsters who did their bit for England by sitting for the portraits include Lisa Hunnewell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Hunnewell; Bill Elliston, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Elliston; Tony Wilcox, son of the junior Fred Wilcoxes, and Francis and Caroline Blake, children of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Blake of Weston.

Among those who dropped in at the Junior League yesterday to admire the exhibit and congratulate the young artist were Mrs. Nathaniel Wales, wearing a wine red velvet dress and large black hat, Miss Lucy Hedge, Mrs. Hammond's aunt, who wore a modish black costume; Miss Clara Perry in French Blue crepe with a matching turban, Mary Mills Hatch and Joseph Bill, a young artist prominent in the affairs of the Copley Society . . .

WEARING this billowy gown of white net, trimmed with silver lace, Lee Stowell Cullen headed a bevy of 60 debutante ushers and flower vendors at last evening's Gardenia Ball at the Copley-Plaza. The affair was held for the benefit of the Charlotte Cushman Club.

The Vegetable Problem

By MARTHA LEE

THE EVERLASTING question of "What vegetable shall we have for dinner tonight?" must be answered every day, so coming to the aid of the harassed homemaker we have a few suggestions to offer. Vegetables must be served for their indispensable mineral and vitamin content; but providing variety for those of the family who like vegetables, yet expect a change from day to day, as well as for those who eat vegetables only under the spell of novelty, often becomes quite a chore for the meal planner.

Vegetable patties, tastefully arranged around a nice brown roast, are so tempting that few can resist them. Carrots and peas, carrots and celery, lima beans, cauliflower, and broccoli are particularly enticing when served in patties. Some families may prefer the vegetable filling unereamed, but most will like a thickening of medium white sauce, which, of course, adds more nutrition to the dish.

Medium white sauce is used as a binder for so many creamed dishes that the knack of making it is something every homemaker should master. Heavy white sauce is used as a foundation for croquettes.

WHITE SAUCE

Medium:
1 cup milk
2 tbsp. butter
2 tbsp. flour
½ tsp. salt

Thick:
1 cup milk
3 tbsp. butter
4 tbsp. flour
½ tsp. salt

Combine flour and butter. Mix to a smooth paste with a little of the milk. Add salt and remaining milk and mix until entirely free of lumps. Cook in the top of a double boiler, stirring frequently. Cook until heavy enough to coat a spoon

ASPARAGUS AND CHEESE FLUFF

2 cups medium white sauce
4 eggs, separated
⅓ cup grated cheese
2 cups asparagus, diced
2 hard cooked eggs, diced
1 tsp. salt
Dash cayenne pepper

Combine all ingredients, except egg whites, with white sauce. Fold stiffly beaten whites into mixture. Pour into buttered casserole. Bake, uncovered, 45 minutes, in a slow oven (325 deg. F.). Serve hot.

VEGETABLE PATTIES

1 medium white sauce recipe
2½ cups cooked vegetables, cut small
6 patty shells
2 egg yolks, or
⅓ cup grated cheese

2 cups flour
¼ tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
⅓ cup fat
¼ cup cold water

Turn out on a floured board, fold and roll to ⅛ inch thickness. Cut into rounds and fit into small pie or muffin pans Prick with a fork. Bake 10 to 12 minutes in a hot oven (425 deg. F.)

Add vegetables to white sauce and fill into baked patty shells. Top with grated cheese and return to the oven for quick browning. Serve hot. If preferred, sprinkle top of vegetable patties with egg yolks, which have been mashed fine with a fork, and serve at once. Makes 6 patties.

MUSHROOM CROQUETTES

1½ cups cooked mushrooms, diced
3 hard cooked eggs, chopped
2 tbsp. minced onion
¼ tsp. dry mustard
½ tsp. salt
Dash of pepper
1½ cups thick white sauce

CARROT SOUFFLE

Love And Marriage

She Loves Boy In Country

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm a girl of 20, in love with a boy of 22, who is a regular country boy. I live in the city. They don't have much money, and as he has an older brother, my boy friend doesn't have much authority at home.

We met at a church affair and saw each other frequently. I've now I find out he has a girl in another city. As it seems as if my sister is falling for him, too He acts as if he thinks more of her than he does of me. Still I'm so deeply in love that I can't eat or sleep.

My mother wants me to forget him and suggests I go to another city. Do you think I should tell him, or should I write him when I reach my destination? Perhaps you'll say I should forget him, but he asked me once to marry him so I think he does like me a little.

SHIRLEY

That country boy sounds like a charmer to me. You've fallen for him, your sister is aware of his drawing power, and he's said to have a girl in another city.

Also, from your own account, he must have a good dash of fickleness in his composition, because, while he asked you to marry him once, he now seems to be more attracted to your sister. Don't you think it's a mistake to take this boy too seriously?

If your mother wants you to go to another city and you have relatives to visit and may meet some interesting people there, I think it would be a good thing. This young man is likely to charm several more girls before he settles down.

Propaganda

By Mary Brush Williams

THERE were a lot of girls rich but without anything in the way of background to advance them when they enrolled in the smart school where Dana Campbell, wealthy and socially secure, was already installed.

She was mighty nice to them and so on returning after two years in Europe just as the crash came and her father died broke and she was left with little more than provision for her next meal they were lovely to her. That is to say, they found her something to do. And what they found was out of the ordinary. It was to mend tapestries and would have been all right if there had been enough tapestries to mend.

Dana had been brought up in an atmosphere of tapestries. When buying them for the estate she had to learn their full value, for her father, rich as he was, saw that she select them discriminatingly, and although he would allow a thousand dollars for purchase of one without a murmur, he would quibble over a dollar and a half to have a stitch in it restored. So Dana, to save argument and other trouble, just learned to mend it herself.

This would be advantageous in one other respect, too, for it would help her cease thinking of Paul Kent—he evidently stopped thinking about her. He was absorbed in his new occupation, which eased from welcome duty to looking for these people spreading propaganda against us. Fifth Columnists, that is. Yes. He was appropriately provided for but what could she do? She would like to do something to help country, the same as Paul did. With security of a week's expenses back of her, assembled from mending tapestries, she reflected on the practicality of getting something to sell.

DANA GETS JOB

The idea was brought to her by a pert girl whose acquaintance she picked up in a cafeteria. She went 'round from house to house offering small $1 radios and dear knows what all besides. But she had the best luck with silk stockings. It was so good that she needed an assistant. Would Dana be that? She would.

Thus this daughter of aristocracy began selling stockings and succeeded so surprisingly that in a few days she took on a side line. Her friend had a tiny elephant which she sold awfully well, as symbol of the G. O. P., and she offered to let her take it on too.

Besides this, a man in Dana's rooming house had a consignment of tiny American flags left on his hands because they were too small. His house would sell them at a loss. The American flag at a loss! It sounded like a sacrilege. But he would let his lot go for five cents each. Dana promptly decided to give up eating for a couple of days and buy them. That wasn't necessary. He would let her have them on time.

Thus, this patrician young woman took to traipsing up and down avenues in smart residential regions through offices in the Wall Street area, weaving in and out of small eating places, speaking to people on stools in drug stores while taking their ice cream sodas, asking them if they would not like to buy a small symbol of Republicanism, an elephant or possibly a tiny American flag standing for everything the world needed and longed for now. She was careful always to mention that it was a little small for practicality but nevertheless it was convenient when one was a refugee. Would they not buy? They would.

The experiences were sweet and heroic in connection with plying her new industry, but the days and the walks were long. She took to sitting more than usual in the parks and at the Battery to rest her weary, weary body—and trying not to think of Paul.

On one she thought she saw him, but of course she was mistaken. What would he be doing around these sorts of places? A boat for some place? When you're fond of someone you're always thinking you're seeing them. Another time she was sure.

Anyway, what was that in her life? Nothing at all. He entered her for looking on as a spectator instead of being an active participant of life. Not until she had some justification for herself would she ever remind him he had once loved her. She noticed where he sat and of course it wasn't comfortable. He seemed to think there was something degenerate in letting yourself be comfortable. Maybe he came here because it wasn't.

She was hearing such a lot about Fifth Columnists. She wondered whether he was trapping any. Wouldn't it be fun to help one's country that way? One could forget a personal love in rendering that kind of service! She looked about her. Presently we wouldn't have any of our old-time America remaining. New York would be like an European seaport—like Liverpool or Constantinople.

She tried to trace the types. Many of them she had seen in their native countries when she had traveled in Europe with headquarters in Munich for two years after her graduation from the smart school. With her natural flare for languages, she used to practice the tongues of the countries. But all of that was forgotten now. She wouldn't know one of the languages from another, much less anything they were saying here in their jitter today.

How beautiful the parks were, and now given over to vagabonds. Several of them tried to pick up acquaintanceship with her, but she answered briefly, retiring into her own thoughts. That is she did until a rather unusually, foreign looking man came over to her bench as she sat at the Battery. He had a younger woman with him. His daughter no doubt.

She was very smart looking. But were attracting hoodlums from all over the world."

The stranger rose to an emotional defense of his point of view. "And what of it? Isn't he entitled to anything? To provision if we've got the cards stacked against him? You—we—think only of ourselves and work and drudgery—and not of beauty and placidity—and others less fortunate than we."

For the first time the feminine voice of the woman beside him spoke. It did not use English but some strange foreign tongue that Dana could not name, and yet half understood. "Don't overdo it," was what the woman was saying. "They will suspect you."

Dana flamed to action. The man who had joined the conversation started to answer, but she silenced him. "You know," she said in delight to the foreigner, "what you say interests me. But I have a

"Don't overdo it," was what the woman was saying. "They will suspect you."

Or, no! It came over her in a flash. He was working out new ones. Of course, strange people were here about him.

"I'VE GOT HIM"

He evinced no surprise as he saw her hurrying toward him, but lifted out his down turned hand. "Sh-h-h," he said, as to a child.

"There's somebody," he said, "I've been looking for—a dangerous person."

Neither of them said anything for a moment. It was a strange conversation with which to resume a romantic acquaintance.

"Maybe I've got him for you," Dana poured out eagerly. "There's some one—he's been talking to me. I thought of you right away. He's suspicious. That's why I've looked you up. He ought to be investigated."

"I've got the low-down on most of them," he answered. "Do you know his name?"

Dana told him.

Paul relaxed from his tenseness and shook his head slowly, almost in amusement. "No," he smiled. "He's been turned in to me about fourteen times. But he's just a whimsical old guy. Harmless. Unless being a bore is harmful. And utterly without purpose."

Dana was beginning to look awfully disappointed, and Paul was anything but that, as he promptly started to assure her. "Unless bringing you back to me is purposeless. As it certainly is not."

He caught her 'round the waist, even in the public location they were in. Still, nobody was paying any attention to them. "What ever made me think I could do without you—in love, in work, or in anything?"

"I don't know. I always knew I couldn't do without you," she said.

THE END.

20 Escape Flames in Sugar Plant

Sweeping up an elevator shaft, a blaze for which three alarms was sounded drove out 20 boiler room workers today at the Revere Sugar Refinery plant on Medford st Charlestown.

The flames spread rapidly through a warehouse and machine shop but was halted from reaching the 10-story main building of the plant by a fire wall. Damage was estimated at $3000.

The fire will saved destruction of thousands of tons of raw sugar as the flames roared upwards and covered the district with heavy smoke.

The smoke was so dense that firemen were forced to don masks and work in relays in order to bring the blaze under control.

Twenty boiler employes were warned of the fire in plenty of time to escape, although most of the 500 workers in the main building were not forced to quit their posts.

land is the best assurance we have for keeping the United States out of the war. I think we should support the fighting men of England for they can stop the onslaught of Hitlerism. I feel we must keep Hitler away from these shores and I'm going over to see for myself what it's all about."

He ended with, "God bless you all."

John Cowles, newspaper publisher, and Landon K. Thorne, banker, two of his friends, accompanied him on the voyage. He expects to return Feb. 10.

He was dressed in a blue suit blue short, dark blue tie, dark top coat, gray hat, black shoes and socks and had a red muffler dangling about his neck. Mrs. Willkie said gently:

"Fix the muffler."

He did

"Have you reserved your air raid shelter?" he was asked.

He grinned. "I've known bombing before."

In a serious vein, he asserted:

"I am not going to England in an official capacity. I'm going as Wendell Willkie, private citizen, to see and hear. I have no plans to speak there formally. I'll undoubtedly talk to some of the British leaders."

He already has an invitation to see Prime Minister Churchill. He also wants to talk with Ernest Bevin, minister of labor.

NEWSOM HIGHEST PAID PLAYER

Sox Castoff Gets More Than Feller's $30,000

DETROIT, Jan. 22 (AP)—Your voluble old pal, Louie (Buck) Newsom, who pitches baseball for the Detroit Tigers, now seems to have the authority for his biggest boast of all, and Buck has to keep silent

Reliable sources disclosed today that Newsom—not Bob Feller of the Cleveland Indians—has become the highest paid twirler in the game's history at a salary in excess of $30,000

Buck will draw pay checks for that tidy sum for the 1941 season.

In keeping with an unwritten law of the Tigers that salaries are never mentioned publicly, the doughty Newsom won't say a word

It was established, however, that Buck will draw a fancier salary than that to be paid Feller, whom the Indians signed yesterday for a reported $30,000.

WON 13 STRAIGHT

Winner of 13 straight games and a World Series star, Newsom in 1940 enjoyed his finest season in a long career in the big leagues.

He won 21 and lost five during the regular season and, in pitching 264 innings, was surpassed only by Feller, John Rigney of the White Sox and Dutch Leonard of Washington.

Owner Walter O. Briggs of the Tigers, reputed to be baseball's highest paying club owner, has let it be known that he pays off "on performance." Some irony therefore creeps into the Tiger situation.

With Newsom given a boost, Hank Greenberg likely to retain his reported $36,000 and rewards to others due for the 1940 championship, the Tigers' salary index apparently is on the uptrend. (Greenberg, however, may be in the Army. Draft board officials said yesterday he would receive his questionnaire next week.)

TEAM DUE TO SLIP

Pay goes up, but the Tigers, say the experts, are going down. Last year the team was known as an "old man's club," and the winter season's forecasters don't give them much chance for repeating as titlists. For the Tigers are getting further along in years.

Barred from trading with other American League clubs, the champions at this date plan to go along in 1941 with virtually the personnel of 1940. Rookies will be at hand, but in no great number.

BOOM RUTH FOR COAST LEAGUE POST

SEATTLE, Jan. 22 (AP)—Names of such big time baseball luminaries as Babe Ruth, Gabby Hartnett and Hazen "Kiki" Cuyler bobbed up today in conjecture over the successor to Jack Lelivelt as manager of Seattle's Pacific Coast League team.

Lelivelt, 53, who skippered Seattle to second place in his first year at the helm and then won two successive championships, died of a heart attack Monday night, shortly after he had mailed out the contracts for his fourth season.

Members of the club's high command declined to comment regarding manager prospects until after Vice-President Roscoe (Torchy) Torrance returns from Lelivelt's funeral at Van Nuys, Cal.

From sources close to the management, however, it was learned that a "big name" manager would be sought.

The names of Ruth, the famous "Sultan of Swat," who has been reported for several seasons as desirous of getting into the managerial end of a major league club; Hartnett, erstwhile Chicago Cub manager, and Cuyler, one-time major league star, who now manages the Chattanooga team, were mentioned immediately as possibilities.

The Seattle managerial spot has been viewed generally as one of the most desirable in minor league baseball. Lelivelt's salary was reputed to be around $12,000 yearly.

Eyes Better, Chapman Sees Big Year With Washington

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 22 (AP)—Eye irritations cured, Ben Chapman is convinced he still is a .300-hitter and a cinch for a comeback in the Washington outfield this season under "the best owner-manager combination in baseball."

What's more, he's happy and ready to go. The erstwhile holdout and problem boy already has signed his 1941 contract, and he "took a cut because I had a bad year and figure I was due it."

His batting average slumped to .286 at Cleveland last season, and the Indians traded him to Washington during the winter. Cleveland doctors told Chapman he needed glasses and he got them, but without results.

A young Montgomery specialist found the trouble, an irritation of the lids. It responded quickly to treatment and vision returned to "normal."

"Yeh," Chapman agreed, "normal is what the doctor says. But my vision is 20-20, and that's perfect."

"I'm tickled, really, that I'm going back to Washington. Bucky Harris is the best manager in the game. He and Clark Griffith make the best owner-manager combination in baseball.

"Told a lot of the fellows last year," he continued, "I'd like to be back in Washington.

'I won the award as the most valuable player on the club there in 1936, and the fact I'm going back under Harris ought to prove I'm not hard to handle, like some folks claim."

While he's 3 2and has 11 years in the majors and two in the minors behind him, Chapman is certain he has "a minimum of five more years in the big time," that he's the second fastest man in the American League and that he'll "hit around .315 to .320" next season. His lifetime average is .309.

Hank Greenberg and a few others may be worried about their draft numbers turning up soon, but not Chapman. His local order number is 1906, and besides, he's got a wife and an 18-month-old son.

The Angel Duels Cox

Maurice Tillet, The Angel, will rule a slight favorite to defeat Joe Cox of Kansas when they meet in the main event of Paul Bowser's weekly show—a world's championship offering—tonight at the Arena.

A portion of the receipts will go to President Roosevelt's Infantile Paralysis Fund.

READY TO SLUG

The Angel has concentrated almost entirely on his "bear-hug" in training, although Karl Pojello, his manager, says he's ready for a real slugging match.

While The Angel has been training on legitimate holds, Cox has been practising up on his punching. A torrid match seems certain.

In the semi-final, Steve (Crusher) Casey, former world's champion, meets Ben Morgan, strong and speedy husky from Texas.

CHAMP OF PHILIPPINES

In the top preliminary, Pantaleon Manlapig, champion of the Philippine Islands, clashes with Rowdy Rudy Dusek of Omaha, while supporting bouts include the Green Dragon, a mystery man, vs. Yvon Robert of Montreal and Jack Wagner of Providence vs. Chris Zaharias of St. Louis.

The first bout goes in the ring at 8.15 while the championship event should get started about 10 p. m.

BASEBALL AND other professional sports are showing much better judgment in their attitude towards the draft than they did during World War days. There has not been any organized effort to get draft deferment for ball players, football stars or for other professional athletes on the ground that their appearance in major competition would help the morale of the country.

The presence of Hank Greenberg, Bob Feller and other young baseball stars in Army camps along with thousands of other American boys would probably do more for morale than anything else. The youngsters who have been obliged to give up their ordinary jobs in civilian life will feel that the national sports hero, capable of earning a fabulous salary, comes under the same laws that govern them.

When the draft bill first passed, there was some talk of having ball clubs organize special drill teams such as the Washington Senators did in the World War, and ask for deferment.

"The public would laugh our players out of the ball parks if they did not take their chances in the Army or Navy with other American boys," said one club owner. "Let us all stand with the draft law, and the game will benefit. Most of the clubs will lose about the same number of men, and over a period of time everything will be even. It is also baseball's duty to give the government 100 per cent support in its defense program."

Professional football took a similar stand. Dennie Shea, vice-president of the National Football League, told me in Boston recently that each club in his circuit will not lose more than four or five men, and that they would be able to get the needed replacements.

Joe Louis Is Ready to Serve

JOE LOUIS, world's heavyweight champion, told reporters in New York he was ready to serve when his number comes up. If Louis should enter Army service he would probably be assigned to athletic duty. He could give boxing exhibitions in the Army camps which would amuse thousands of service men, and also keep him physically fit.

It is also likely that Louis could make arrangements with Army authorities by which he could make occasional professional ring appearances. During the World War Eddie Shevlin, former Roxbury welterweight star, and other service men were granted permission to participate in professional ring contests.

With so many ball players in the draft age, the league pennants may be decided on the time when draft numbers come up. Take Bob Feller away from Cleveland in the middle of the summer and it is unlikely that the Indians would have the necessary pitching strength to win the pennant. The loss of Greenberg by the Tigers in June or July would probably cost the club its opportunity to win the American League championship this year.

Few Jockeys Subject to First Draft

FEW JOCKEYS are subject to the first draft call. Most of the jockeys who race at New England tracks are under 21 years of age, while almost all of those who are 21 years of age or older are married. In most cases married men will be granted deferment by their draft boards.

A married jockey who has set aside a bankroll would have to join the Army.

Dan Topping, wealthy owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers and husband of Sonja Henie, finds himself subject to an early draft call. Dan, of course, cannot claim that Sonja is dependent for support on him as her earnings go close to $1,000,000 a year. Even the Dodgers can get along without Topping's personal attention provided he furnishes the money to pay the bills.

With the thought in mind that he may be in the Army by next fall, Topping has already almost completed arrangements by which Larry MacPhail and the regular office staff of the Brooklyn Baseball Club will handle the football affairs of the Dodgers next fall.

There is less chance of a prominent athlete or sports promoter securing draft deferment than the ordinary citizen even if they wished it. The eyes of the country are upon the greats in sports, and they are expected to do the right thing in the matter of the draft.

Like most other young Americans, the star athletes are not enthusiastic over the thought they may be obliged to give up their positions in sports for a year, but they are willing to accept

FIVE U.S. SINGLES TITLES GOAL OF FRANKIE KOVACS

ORLANDO, Fla., Jan. 22 (AP)—Unpredictable Frankie Kovacs, the good humor man of tennis, turned serious long enough today to disclose that his ambition is to win the national singles tennis title five times—no less.

The Oakland, Cal., youngster declared that he wouldn't quit playing tennis unless or until he does and added that he would never turn pro.

BEAT McNEILL

That's quite an order for a fellow who until recently was better known for his clowning than his playing, but Frankie has these encouraging facts to enhance his prospects for realizing his ambition:

He is only 21 years old, already is the nation's third ranking player, has the rangy physique and the powerful strokes—when he uses them—of a great player, and he is fresh from triumphs in the first two tournaments on the Florida winter circuit.

It was an upset when Kovacs eliminated National Champion Don McNeill of Oklahoma City in the Dixie tournament at Tampa early this month.

He was serious for that match, a semi-final, but resumed his clowning when he breezed past Eddie Allon of Rollins College in the finals.

Frankie turned serious again yesterday in the finals of the Florida State tournament to crush McNeill by scores of 6—2, 6—4, 6—0.

NEXT MATCH "TOSSUP"

Observers say that McNeill may be stale from too much tennis during his South American tour but probably will be much tougher when the chips are down—say in the nationals next summer.

Kovacs said it would be "a toss-up" when next they meet.

Frankie goes with the tennis troupers today to St. Petersburg for the Florida West Coast tournament, and planas to continue around the circuit.

ALICE MARBLE

Plays Here as Pro

TILDEN TEAMS WITH ALICE

William Tatum Tilden, 2d, the Peter Pan of the tennis world, comes to Boston Garden tomorrow night. This time his opponent on the Garden court will be none other than the reigning professional champion, red-headed Donald Budge of Oakland, Cal.

Big Bill never was one to pick his spots. The tougher they came, the better he liked it, and apparently the years have not changed him. The Old Master won his first United States national championship in 1913, two years before Donald Budge was born. Today he is still going strong and looking forward to his match with the California Comet.

The attractive tennis program will also show the American tennis queen, blonde Alice Marble of California, making her pro debut before New England followers in a singles match with Mary Hardwick, England's No. 1 woman tennis star. Then later on the program Tilden and Miss Marble will match racquets with Budge and Miss Hardwick in doubles (two out of three).

Grove Signs Blank Contract

Robert Moses "Lefty" Grove, veteran southpaw and oldest active player in the American League, for the first time in his 16-year major league career has signed a blank contract.

Announcement of Grove's signing had been announced today by the Boston Red Sox. He signed the blank contract two weeks ago while visiting Tom Yawkey in the South. Yawkey later inserted the figure for Grove's salary and mailed the contract to the Red Sox offices.

The aging southpaw, who celebrates his 41st birthday March 6, seeks to reach a lifetime of 300 victories this season. At the end of the 1940 season he had 294 games to his credit.

Bears Obeck Named To Akron Grid Post

AKRON, O., Jan. 22 (AP)—Appointment of Victor Obeck, playing coach in charge of the line with the Boston Bears of the Americans Pro League last season, as first assistant Akron University football coach was announced today by Otis Douglas, recently named head coach.

Borican Enters Casey 1000

One of the greatest 1000 yards field in Boston Indoor racing history will go to the mark in the K. of C.-Prout games at Boston Garden Saturday night.

Manager Bill Kenney announced last night that John Borican, New York Negro, will strive for his third straight victory in the Bishop Cheverus trophy contest, and that Andy Niednig, Manhattan's blond bombshell, will make an eighth starter.

It had been planned to limit the field to seven men, but the Prout games committee decided to permit two local entrants to join the chase. These are Harlan Woods of the B. A. A., New England indoor mile champion, and Jack Haley of Holy Cross running unattached.

The other four entries will be Campbell Kane of Indiana and Jim Kehoe of Maryland, who finished one-two in the V. F. W. 1000; Jim Rafferty, former Fordham star, who showed flashes of his old speed in the Metropolitan championships Saturday, and North Carolina University's Dave Morrison, the third Tarheel to compete in this event. Morrison was preceded as a Cheverus 1000-yard contestant by Harry Williamson and Jim Davis.

Veteran Root Balks At 'Unjust' Pay Cut

CHICAGO, Jan. 22 (AP)—"I'll never sign the contract they offered me."

That unequivocal statement didn't come from a pop-off or publicity-seeking ball player, but from quiet, genial Charles Henry Root, who has built up a tremendous following in his 15 years with the Chicago Cubs.

Root and the Cubs, represented by James Timothy Gallagher, new general manager, are reportedly rather far apart on their respective estimates of Root's worth to the club in 1941. Winner of only two games last season when he was used mainly as a relief hurler, he was asked to take a heavy cut this year.

WITH CUBS 15 YEARS

"I've tried to be fair with the Cubs for 15 years," Root said while here to confer with Gallagher, "and I want them to be fair with me now.

"I can still pitch every week, but I can't be in the bullpen every day warming up and expect to do any good. I don't want to be traded. I've spent my big league life here and I want to stay here. I expected a cut, perhaps, but not one like I got. I won't sign for what they offered. That's definite."

Root, who will be 42 years old before another season gets under way, also has his heart set on reaching the 200-victory total. Only four big leaguers now active are over that mark—Red Ruffing, Lefty Grove, Ted Lyons and Fred Fitzsimmons.

The Cub veteran has won 193 games since joining the Cubs in 1926, winning 13 or more games in 10 of his 15 seasons. Root thinks that on the once-a-week schedule under which Lyons operates for the White Sox he could easily reach the 200 mark this season and be a big help to the Cubs.

RECEIVED $10,000 LAST YEAR

The Cubs have paid Root about $228,000 in salaries so far, $22,500 being his top figure about 10 years ago. He was paid in the neighborhood of $10,000 last season.

Several other Cubs, including Hank Leiber, outfielder, and Clyde McCullough, rookie catcher, have balked at signing their contracts, but none can even come close to matching Root's popularity with the North Side fans.

Zivic Planning Trip to Florida

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 22 (INS)—Fritzie Zivic, world's welterweight champion, planned a Florida vacation today as the treatment for cuts and the small hand fracture he suffered in successfully defending his title against Henry Armstrong last Friday.

Zivic underwent a checkup yesterday in St. Francis' Hospital, where an X-ray picture disclosed the injury to his left hand. Physicians said it would require several weeks to heal. The champ sported a slight head cut, suffered when he drove into Armstrong's teeth during a clinch.

HAYES, NARDONE EXPECTED TO WIN 'ALL' TITLES FOR WEST

By EDGAR HAYES

DETROIT, Jan. 22—Tremendous excitement centers around tomorrow night's Mid-Western All-America amateur boxing championships. A jammed house is a certainty at the Detroit Olympia as the cream of the simon-pure pack all the way from Pittsburgh to Buffalo battle it out for the great distinction of qualifying for the trip to the Grand National All-America championships to be held in Garden next Monday night.

Several outstanding performers look to be destined to represent the Mid-West against the champions of the East and California in the Boston finals.

Unless an upset of major proportions occurs, Charles Hayes and Prisco Nardone should be in the party leaving Detroit Saturday and arriving in Boston early Sunday morning. Both come from the "Automobile City."

BEST SINCE LOUIS

Hayes is our brilliant middleweight, acclaimed as the greatest amateur developed in these parts since Joe "The Brown Bomber" Louis.

Nardone is a lightweight, a dangerous hitter and a difficult southpaw to fight. He has been sensational in all his performances during the elimination series in Detroit. He is clever as well as being a slugger and it will take a lot of fighter to get him out of the Boston tournament, Eddie Sierras of California and William "Jerry" Moore of New York, notwithstanding to the contrary.

Still a third Detroit "hope" is Tony Plesha, a big, rough, tough light heavyweight. We're hoping to see him win and then meet up with Boston's Tommy Sullivan. The fur will fly, I'm sure of that. Plesha is good. He can hit with both hands, but more important, knows how to keep from getting hit himself.

WON 4 TITLES IN '40

Plesha's chief rival tomorrow night will be Rudy Zorich of Buffalo, another brusing fighter. He comes into the Mid-West All-America finals with a most impressive knockout record behind him. Upper New York State is confident he will be our light heavyweight ambassador to Boston.

The more we look over our Mid-West team's chances in Boston, the more we are impressed with this probable outfit. A year ago we cleaned up four of the eight Grand National All-America championships in San Francisco, and this year we are confident of doing at least as well and probably better.

HOPEFUL—Fight experts are predicting that Prisco Nardone, above, will wade through the Mid-Western All-America bouts tomorrow night and then go on to win the National title in Boston next Monday night.

Moore, East's Hope in 135's, Real Student of Ring Game

By PAUL GARDNER

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—William "Jerry" Moore, brother of the famous amateur heavyweight, Buddy Moore, a well-knit lightweight, is New York's emissary for the 135-pound National All-America boxing championships to be decided at Boston Garden next Monday evening.

William, a high school student, is just as studious in the ring. He takes his homework seriously — training hard and judiciously with his closest friend, Charles Davis, the Eastern All-America featherweight champion, another New Yorker.

That conditioning with his sharpshooting stablemate undoubtedly aided him in outboxing Dom Bacala of Baltimore and hard-hitting Billy Daley of Boston in the Eastern All-America championships at Boston Garden last month.

Moore is an excellent boxer, has the sturdiness of a heavyweight and punches devastatingly. He has had 45 fights during his amateur career and has lost but two of them. One of these reverses was in the finals to the 1939 New York All-America lightweight novice victor, Danny Bartfield, who has already scored 25 consecutive victories since turning professional.

Mayor of Lowell To Lead Boosters Of 'Golden Boy'

Mayor George Ash of Lowell will head a large delegation of fight fans from his city who will be at ringside for the Grand National All-America amateur boxing championships at Boston Garden next Monday evening.

Mayor Ash will be a guest of the sponsors, the American-Record and the Irish-American A. A. His Honor was chief speaker at the testimonial dinner to Dave "Golden Boy" Andrews, famous Lowell welterweight, held at the Lowell Boys' Club and attended by more than a hundred townsfolk. He urged all Lowell fans to "pack Boston Garden and lend loud support for one of the finest amateurs and cleanest youngsters ever produced in New England sports history.

The "Golden Boy" was presented a handsome traveling bag.

COAST FIGHTERS TURN BAGGAGE CAR INTO GYM

By DAVE BRANDMAN

TUCSON, Ariz., Jan. 22—Aboard Southern Pacific's Golden State Limited. Strange things are happening on board this fast moving streamliner as the pride of the Pacific Coast—California's All-America amateur boxing champions—speed toward Boston.

Yes, strange things to see and hear, the thud of leather pounding against the bare flesh of bodies in a boxing ring rolling along at 60 miles an hour and eight young lithe and tawny gladiators skipping rope, shadowboxing, stretching and running circles as they limber up for their coming meeting with "Old Man Opportunity."

Only there's a scant audience to witness the unusual procedure, just a trainer, a newspaperman and an assorted variety of accompanying suitcases and trunks.

The scene is quite a contrast to what we anticipate when we enter our California team into combat next Monday night at Boston Garden against the picked crop of Mid-Western and Eastern All-America champions in the Grand National All-America title tournament.

The baggage car of this crack flyer is our training center. A temporary ring has been constructed for our champions and each and every one of the octet is working as faithfully as though he were in his home town gymnasium.

The California party arrives at South Station, Boston, at 10:58 a. m. on Friday.

CAIN, BRIMSEK EXTEND BRUINS' STREAK

STYMIED—Roy Conacher's attempt for a goal in the third period is stopped by Rangers' Goalie Davie Kerr, who goes to the ice to make the save. Ranger Art Coulter eased the pressure a little for Kerr when he forced Conacher to hurry his shot. Had the goal scored, the Bruins would have won in regulation time. Herbie Cain kept the locals' streak intact when he belted in the winning marker in the overtime period. Bruins won, 4 to 3.

Rangers Bow in Overtime

By BILL GRIMES

Before a critical but enthusiastic gathering of 15,000 odd fans, the Bruins extended their undefeated streak to twelve games by defeating the New York Rangers, 4 to 3, in overtime last night at the Garden.

Herbie Cain and Frankie Brimsek were the heroes.

Cain, who was sent to the Bruins' farm team at Hershey, Pa., late last week, returned just in time to play a major role in the Boston victory. He scored two goals and assisted on another while tying up the game in the third period after a three-man attack with Milt Schmidt and "Red" Hamill. And shortly after half time in overtime, Herbie caged the winning marker, by completing a well-timed pass from "Schmiddy," who had received the puck from Bobby Bauer.

The odd goal was scored by Roy Conacher in the second period with the asistance of Dez Smith.

Frankie Brimsek was at the very top of his best form last night. The Rangers beat him for a lucky goal thirty-five seconds after the opening face-off of the second period and Alex Shibicky came through with a real tally before the close of that chapter.

Then in the third period Phil Watson beat him on a fine shot, which wound up a three man attack.

But aside from those three occasions Brimsek was very much the boss man. Time and again he was left high and dry by the Boston rear guard, but Rangers couldn't beat him. In all probability Brimsek made as many sensational saves last night as he has ever come up with in one game.

There were times when the Rangers actually looked like "bushers" trying to score on Brimsek. They appeared to have the Boston goalie at their mercy on many occasions, but in some way Frankie managed to get in front of shots which were labeled goals.

• • •

Dr. Thomas A. Kelley put one stitch in Clint Smith's head after the game . . . It was Terry Reardon, who nicked the little Ranger . . . Herbie Cain qualified to remain with the Bruins. He made two goals and received an assist on Bobby Bauer's tally .

Students Want Slip Madigan

MOSCOW, Ida., Jan. 22 (INS)—Selection of Edward "Slip" Madigan, former St. Mary's coach, as head football mentor at the University of Idaho was urged today in petitions circulated by students.

The student campaign to engage the former coach of the Galloping Gaels to succeed Coach Ted Bank, recently released, was indirectly encouraged by President Harrison C. Dale's promise of "re-emphasis" for the Idaho athletic program.

11-YEAR-OLD TWINS ENTER SKATE DERBY

Marilyn and Marjorie Mullen are 11-year-old twins. They live in West Medford and they're so much alike in looks that even their proud parents have trouble telling them apart. They're cute as the dickens, with long pigtail braids of chestnut dangling to their hips.

But most important now is that they're going to compete in the big Silver Skates Derby of February 16 at Boston Garden. And they're thrilled to pieces. They'll be entered in the Midget Class, for girls under 12 years of age.

But here is their own letter verbatim. It's such letters as these and such youngsters which to the Silver Skates Derby editor make this annual skating carnival a wonderful event—a carnival of human interest.

The letter follows:

"My sister and I are twins and we have been skating ever since we were five years old. We have raced with friends and won, and can do a few fancy skatings together. We are eleven years old and are in the sixth grade of the Brooks School. We are residents of West Medford, Mass.

"My brother is on a hockey team and skates very well. My oldest sister is a beautiful skater. We have no real professional skaters in our family but we all do well. We have never had a lesson but have been taught by those who taken them.

"We were going to enter the Derby last year but we did not think we had enough practice to do so. This year we have practiced thoroughly and we would try to do as well as the rest. Skating is our best and favorite winter sport."

The lovely little letter, written in a fine childish hand, is signed by both Marjorie and Marilyn.

Needless to say the Mullen twins are welcome. The Derby editor is tickled that they feel they have enough practice to make this year's event. And all such youngsters are given a warm invitation to enter this speed skating tournament.

The Silver Skates is a great annual triumph because of such children. The Derby belongs to them. Come on, all you youngsters. Let's hear from you.

Clancy Correct In Ice Ruling

For the remainder of the week the Bruins will take things easy. They have been overworked of late and are badly in need of a layoff. However, Manager Art Ross ordered Pat McReavy, Terry Reardon, Gordie Bruce, Herbie Cain, Art Jackman, Des Smith, Red Hamill and Jack Crawford to report for a light workout today.

"King" Clancy was correct in his penalty shot ruling when Roy Conacher fell on the puck while it was in the crease . . . It was a worthwhile penalty, for the Rangers would have scored but for Conacher's rule infraction . . . The crowd was the largest of the season, slightly over the 15,000 mark.

• • •

In the gathering was Arthur Duffey, Jr., son of the old sprinter, and a former Harvard puck chaser. Young "Duff" is flying a flagship between New York and Washington and makes one round trip each week between here and New York. He arrived at 8:15, taxied to the Garden and flew out again at 10:30, so he missed the great overtime session.

Medford Fetes Football Team

Medford High School's football team, which defeated Malden High on Thanksgiving Day for the first time since 1923, will be feted tonight with a testimonial dinner at the high school gymnasium.

An entertaining program has been arranged by Tim Feeny, chairman of the committee which will be topped off with the showing of the Brown-Army, All-Stars-Gian's, Coloy-Bowdoin and B. C.-Tennessee Sugar Bowl games pictures.

SKI SCRIBBLINGS
BY "TAP" GOODENOUGH

Clear the trails for a rugged racer!

Born to ski, Selden Hannah, former Dartmouth delineator of the winged boards, cannot be stopped. The bronzed, sandy-haired skier, who runs the inviting Ski Hearth Farm in Franconia, N. H., with his charming wife, Polly, is now in top form, despite the fact that he has been out of the hospital only nine weeks after an appendectomy.

Only a week ago last Sunday, racing for the Franconia Ski Club, he won the club's open slalom from a field of over 60 schussers on Cannon Mountain. This past Sabbath found Sel finishing a very close third in the Eastern Slopes Ski Club's slalom on Cranmore Mountain.

Hannah started to ski before he could walk, and was rather adept on the hickorys at the age of 10. He attended high school at Berlin, N. H., his home town, and skied every moment there was snow on the ground. Sel is really a self-made skier, but his older brother, Paul, taught all of the necessary fundamentals of the art, including how to stop, this being something about which the youthful Hannah never worried.

WANTED TO GO TO STANFORD

Competing for the Nansen Ski Club of Berlin, N. H., brought out Sel's skill as a jumper. The lad used old-fashioned Norwegian irons as a harness on his jumping skis, and he still has these as souvenirs on his mantle. Gunner Michaelsson, a veteran leaper, and Cannonball Thorne, another old-timer, taught Sel all they knew about flying the hickorys from the heights. Under their guidance, he worked hard and attained great proficiency.

This skiing ace wanted to go to Stanford University, but finally entered Dartmouth under the persuasion of his brother, a Big Green alumnus. At Hanover, Sel had no difficulty in making the ski team, specializing in the classic combined event, cross-country and jumping. He also ran in the downhill and slalom races.

LAUDS OLD COACH

Due to his versatility, many points were garnered by the Dartmouth ski team for the ensuing four years. As a senior, he was elected captain of the team in 1935 . . "Mainly because there was not anyone else there!" Sel puts it very modestly, but it is our guess that his ability won him his laurels.

Otto Schneibs coached the skiers while Sel was competing for Dartmouth.

"And he was certainly one of the greatest of the ski meisters," declared this husky racer. "It was not only the skiing technique that Otto imparted, but his philosophy and the spirit he instilled in his younger charges. The boys learned real companionship with Otto, who wanted to help people to discover how to live happily."

It was this coach who uttered that classic quotation that "Skiing is a way of life."

GOT LOST IN RACE

Sel's initiation to cross-country racing at Dartmouth was very unique and amusing. When a freshman, he decided to try this type of racing and entered a trial meet. The course was laid out from Moose Mountain to Hanover, over nine miles of rolling country. All this was a new and strange experience to Sel, who had not the least idea about proper training methods for such an event. The jaunt was set for the morning, so our skier proceeded to eat a breakfast of tremendous proportions. Thus reinforced he went forth, the knight-errant on skis . . .

SELDEN HANNAH

Waxing was not any problem to Sel, he never used any! He borrowed a tube of another contestant, and it may even have been tooth paste, but it worked!

Being in grand condition from mountain climbing, this embryonic langlaufer set off at a running pace, poling furiously. Soon he had passed all of the other competitors and kept on going so fast that he lost the course, climbing Balch Hill by mistake. Upon discovering his error he quickly kick-turned about and raced after the field that had passed him by this time. With an almost superhuman burst of speed, he not only regained the field, but kept on to win the race! Henceforth, he always devoured a huge meal before competing.

THIRD YEAR AT FRANCONIA

Although Sel was very consistent in his skiing at Dartmouth, he did even better while competing for McGill University, where he went for one year to study medicine. Racing under the McGill colors, he won the intercollegiate championships at the Dartmouth winter carnival in 1936. He also captured the Canadian championship.

Mr. and Mrs. Hannah are now entering their third season in Franconia, where they operate the delightful Ski Hearth Farm. Two trunk rooms and other private rooms provide accommodations for 20 skiers, the true have for Sanctuaries. Skiing atmosphere permeates this abode. Hospitality abounds in the large living room with its fire place, where the flames sing songs of skiing. Meals are served at a long, rustic table in the dining room which is done in knotty pine sporting prints spotting the walls.

HEADS SKI PATROL

Approximately enough, Sel met Polly when they were both skiing at Hanover. They have been married for three years, and are now raising two future ski racers who will follow in their father's ski tracks . . .

Since the Cannon Mountain Ski Patrol has been organized, Sel has served as head of this efficient outfit. This winter, however, he is taking a rest from his duties as patrol member. He is very affable and most popular with his host of friends and skiers throughout the country . . . A real skier and a real man!

Franconia Flashes

This skier ran the trails on Cannon Mountain, last week-end, and had grand sport. The new snowfall added about ten inches of powder to the cover already there, providing fast running. Members of the ski patrol had been side-stepping and smoothing out all of the trails, and, with a little more snow, conditions should be excellent . . . All open slopes in the Franconia Notch Area are the best they have been this year . . .

Lydia duPont is vacationing in the Area, taking ski lessons from Peter Gabriel . . . Carol Reed, ski shop owner, and John Jay, Jr., noted for his ski films have been seen on the slopes . . . President John Chapman and the entire Franconia Ski Club are working hard to whip plans in shape for the coming Eastern Amateur Championships on Cannon Mountain, February 15th and 16th . . . Roland Peabody's son, Roger, is serving ably on the ski patrol this season . . . Audrey Drubmel and Evelyn Reade, well-known fashion models from New York, have been staying at the Iron Mine Inn. They are up here posing for commercial purposes . . .

The Littleton Chamber of Commerce is going to give a series of free skiing lessons for residents, young and old, on the Mount Eustis slope. Lonny Colby will do the instructing . . .

Dr. Bogle of Littleton is a tireless skier. Between office hours, he races over to Cannon Mountain and runs the trails at top speed. The doctor trains for skiing by skipping rope morning and night . . .

Ski Shots

Skiers! Mark the dates of Feb. 1st and 2d as those set for the annual Winter Carnival at Ossipee, N. H. The cups and trophies to be awarded in the races at this carnival are the biggest and best that will be presented for any such events this season. All races are open to unclassified skiers, or come who may. Local ski clubs should send entries at once for their teams to Ken Diller at Center Ossipee . . .

The second examination for the Certification of Professional Ski Instructors during the 1940-41 season will be held on Monday, Jan. 27th, at the Pico Peak Ski School in Rutland, Vt., and Karl Acker is the head examiner. Those interested in taking this examination may apply for an application blank, and a Blue Book which contains information necessary for the written part of the test, to Ford K. Sayre, Hanover, N. H.
